

Delayed Kopechne Inquest Begins With Secret Kennedy Testimony

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy began describing in detail today at the long-delayed inquest into the death of Miss Mary Jo Kopechne the midsummer auto accident that claimed the attractive young secretary's life.

Kennedy took the stand shortly after the secret inquest opened. He testified for about an hour; then a brief recess was called. He returned to the stand afterward.

Kennedy, appearing relaxed and smiling, arrived at the inquest with his blonde wife Joan. Together they walked from a nearby house through the front door of the old brick courthouse where the inquiry is being held.

Most of the other witnesses already had arrived.

"Yes, I am," Kennedy said when a newsman asked if he was glad the inquest finally had begun. The senator had flown in by private plane a half-hour earlier from his home in Hyannis Port on Cape Cod.

Escorting the couple was William Barry, a New York banking security expert who served as a body guard to the late Robert F. Kennedy, during the 1968 presidential campaign.

The first key figure to arrive was Edgartown Dist. Judge James A. Boyle, who showed up at the courthouse more than two hours before the scheduled opening of the inquiry.

In the next couple of hours, attorneys for the parties in the case showed up in separate groups.

Dist. Atty. Edmund S. Dinis of New Bedford, who requested the inquiry, arrived with a retinue of three aides; and the five other men and five young women who attended a cookout preceding the accident arrived separately.

Only Kennedy responded to the inquiries of about 60 newsmen who had been stamping their feet to keep warm in the sub-freezing air.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court ordered that the inquest be held in secret and that the record be locked up until all possibility of any criminal prosecution has passed. Newsmen will see the witnesses come and go but probably will learn little about the inquest in under way.

State and local police will guard the courthouse. State police are even checking the court chamber for listening devices.

After a light snowfall had turned Edgartown into a Christmas card scene Sunday, five young women and five men arrived on the island and were quietly driven to private homes to await their appearances in court.

It was a far cry from their joyous arrival on the weekend of July 18. Then they were here to watch Kennedy race in the Edgartown Regatta and to attend a steak cookout in a little rented cottage on Chappaquiddick Island.

The party ended in tragedy when Kennedy, who said he and Miss Kopechne were driving to catch the last ferry back to Edgartown, made a wrong turn which led to the accident at treacherous Dike Bridge.

Kennedy escaped but Miss Kopechne was trapped in the car. By his own account in an emotional, nationally televised statement, the senator wandered in confusion back to the cottage, called his cousin Joseph F. Gargan and another close friend, attorney Paul Markham, from the party to dive for Miss Kopechne, then swam to Edgartown across the narrow ferry channel.

A week later, he pleaded guilty to leaving the accident scene. Boyle imposed a two-month sentence and suspended it.

An inquest—which is a fact-finding inquiry and not a trial—was ordered by Dist. Atty. Edmund S. Dinis of New Bedford. First scheduled for early September, it was postponed when the Kennedy lawyers asked the Massachusetts Supreme Court to bar the press and to permit attorneys to cross-examine witnesses.

The high court consented to the press ban, but endorsed

Boyle's decision to permit lawyers in the court room only when their clients are testifying—and then only to advise them of their constitutional rights.

Kennedy, his wife Joan, and their children Edward Jr. and Kara, went to Colorado Dec. 23 for a skiing holiday.

Kennedy returned to Washington Jan. 1 and arrived in Boston Saturday.

He traveled Sunday from Boston to his home in Hyannis Port across Nantucket Sound from the Vineyard. He decided to fly to Edgartown by private plane this morning for the 10 a.m. opening which Boyle ordered all witnesses to attend.

The No. 2 Democrat in the Senate has repeatedly said he looks forward to the inquest so that he can answer on a public record any questions that went unanswered in his television report.

He has told friends he is mainly concerned about a statement by John Farrar, the diver who took the body from the car, that Miss Kopechne could have survived in an air pocket long enough to have been saved if Kennedy had summoned help immediately.

Kennedy vehemently denies this in private and will try to introduce expert, scientific testimony from a private consulting

Arrive at Inquest

Spectators crowd around Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and his wife Joan as they enter Dukes County Court House for the inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne. Miss Kopechne was killed when Sen. Kennedy's car, in which she was riding, plunged off a bridge into the water near Chappaquiddick Island last July.

Scientists May Unveil Moon Rock Mysteries

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Theories may tumble and mysteries dissolve today as 142 scientists start revealing results of the first detailed analysis of rock and soil from the moon.

The scientists, from the United States and eight foreign countries, will report on 90 days of studying material brought to earth by Apollo 11.

About 18 pounds—a third of what astronauts Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin Jr., came back with—were distributed to the scientists Sept. 12 after a 50-day preliminary examination at the lunar receiving laboratory.

Results from the preliminary examination indicated that:

—The moon material had at one time been molten rock.

—The rocks had been lying quietly on the surface of the moon for up to 150 million years, indicating that the moon may have turned cold after a fiery birth.

—The rocks crystallized about four billion years ago, as early as any rocks dated on earth and about the time many believe the universe was formed.

The preliminary tests, however, did little to settle the most hotly contested debate among scientists: where the moon came from and how it got its distinctive surface features.

Studies conducted on the Apollo 11 samples include analysis of the mineral content, which will show how much, if any, water was present when the rocks crystallized on the moon's surface.

Taxation Group Calls Meeting Thursday Night

Citizens For Equitable Taxation, a newly-formed taxpayers organization, has called a second meeting for Thursday night to protest what it calls a "giveaway" of city taxes.

Originally called the "Taxpayers Protection Committee," the group was organized last Tuesday. Its primary target is the recently-passed public housing program here, which it mainly opposes on the grounds that it provides no property tax benefits to the city.

The group also has turned its guns at industrial plants built with revenue bonds, which do not pay property taxes for the life of the bond retirement.

Organizers of the Citizens for Equitable Taxation are Aaron Haller and Neal Reyburn.

The Thursday meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Farm and Home Building.

Burglarize Area School Friday Night

GREEN RIDGE — The latest in a pattern of thefts at schools occurred Friday night at Green Ridge School, where several electric typewriters and adding machines valued at $3,500 were stolen.

School officials listed the stolen items as follows:

Six electric typewriters, two adding machines, two 16mm movie projectors, one 35mm slide projector, two tape recorders, a microscope projector and portable public address system.

Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said the thieves gained entry by breaking out a window on the west side of the building.

The theft was the fourth in a recent series of similar cases in the area, with the Smithton, Otterville and Pilot Grove schools also reporting large losses of office equipment.

In each case, Fairfax said, the pattern is for the thieves to steal only electric typewriters and adding machines, ignoring manual equipment.

South Vietnam's Senate Calls Massacre U.S. Act

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese Senate approved a resolution tonight stating that a "regrettable incident happened" at My Lai and called it "the single act of a U.S. unit."

The Senate demanded that President Nguyen Van Thieu take steps to safeguard the lives of South Vietnamese civilians.

Earlier a Senate investigating committee had reported it found U.S. troops had massacred civilians. However, the Senate resolution, adopted after nearly eight hours of debate, does not use the word massacre.

Twenty-five out of the 29 senators present voted to approve a measure that said a "regrettable incident happened, causing fatalities and damaging the properties of civilians and is the single act of a U.S. unit."

The Senate's action was a rebuke of President Thieu, who ordered an investigation into the My Lai affair only after reports of it were published in the United States.

The Senate resolution in effect, rejected the government's Nov. 22 report that no such massacre occurred at the coastal hamlet on March 16, 1968.

The Senate also demanded that Thieu take steps to safeguard "the lives and property of the people, especially those in contested areas."

The Senate also demanded that Thieu "take the initiative in the conduct of the war" by "unifying the commands between the South Vietnamese armed forces and the allies."

An earlier resolution of Sen. Tran Van Don, sponsored by the Senate's Defense Committee after a joint legislative group inspected the area, twice called the incident a massacre.

This resolution said Thieu "must bear the entire responsibility." It charged that Thieu made only a cursory investigation and failed to make certain that his subordinates clearly understood "national policy" on the conduct of the war.

By this, the report apparently referred to a need for closer cooperation between province chiefs and allied military forces operating in the field.

Thieu's government has maintained since last November that no massacre by U.S. troops took place in My Lai, although the U.S. Army has filed charges against two soldiers. One of them, 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., is accused of murdering 109 civilians in the village on March 16, 1968.

"A number of U.S. troops fired and killed indiscriminately, causing fatalities to a number of civilians, most of them aged people, women and children," the Senate report said without estimating the total number killed.

Mississippi Schools Open Doors

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Eleven Mississippi school districts opened their doors under federal court desegregation orders without incident today in what one white school principal called "a history-making situation."

Federal marshals looked on as Negro pupils entered schools which once were predominantly white, and white pupils went to classes in formerly all-Negro schools. There were no incidents reported as classes resumed after Christmas vacation.

Allies Clash With Enemy Three Times

SAIGON (AP) — Government infantrymen and U.S. Marines operating in South Vietnam's northern provinces clashed with enemy troops twice Sunday following a flurry of enemy attacks in the area Saturday night. South Vietnamese troops fought a third battle in the Mekong Delta.

The U.S. Command reported that Marines and enemy troops exchanged rifle and machine-gun fire 24 miles south of Da Nang. One Marine was killed and five wounded in the brief fight, and enemy losses were unknown.

South Vietnamese communiques claimed 17 North Vietnamese soldiers were killed by the government's highly rated 1st Infantry Division in a battle about five miles below the demilitarized zone.

Eighteen Viet Cong were reported killed by government troops in scattered fighting along the banks of the Mekong River 80 miles southwest of Saigon.

Field reports said two government soldiers were killed and 41 wounded in the two battles.

The U.S. Command reported 10 enemy rocket and mortar attacks during the night, but said only four of them caused casualties or damage.

BULLETIN

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Joseph (Jack) Yablonski, unsuccessful candidate in the election race for the presidency of the United Mineworkers Union was found murdered, state police said today.

Officers said they also found the body of two women believed to be his wife and daughter at their home in the heart of Pennsylvania's soft coal region.

Argentina Flood Claims High Death Toll Sunday

MENDOZA, Argentina (AP) — A six-foot wall of mud and water from a burst flood control dam raged through this city in the Andes foothills Sunday and police reported 23 persons were known killed.

The report of the death toll came from the police chief, Col. Adolfo Diaz. Earlier reports had the toll as high as 33 known dead and radio reports from this area said the number dead could reach 70.

Rescue crews searched today for more possible victims.

A torrential all-day rain had swollen the Mendoza River to overflowing, causing flooding in many areas outside the city of 700,000. Suddenly the dam burst at Godoy Cruz, a small village just outside the city.

The flood of mud and water drowned motorists in their cars as it swept the autos along the streets. It uprooted trees, smashed houses, swept pedestrians off their feet and raged through streetside outdoor cafes.

At least 500 people were left homeless or injured as the water and mud ripped into flimsy shacks on the edge of the city, police reported.

Government officials estimated that wind and rain in Neuquen and Rio Negro provinces, south of Mendoza, have destroyed at least half of this year's apple and pear crops, which were to have been harvested this month.

Telephone and cable communications with the city were cut off and electrical power was disrupted.

Gov. Eugenio Blanco reported that police, firemen, civil defense workers and soldiers had been organized into rescue teams. Their efforts were hindered by continuing heavy rain through the night.

Agnew Clarifies Policy

BANGKOK (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew appears to be making headway in communicating a clearer definition of the Nixon Doctrine to the leaders of U.S. allies in Asia.

Conversations with diplomats and members of the vice presidential party indicate Agnew is off to a good start as a presidential emissary.

One of the main reasons for his 11-nation Asian tour was to clear up misunderstandings about the policy President Nixon outlined last July in Guam, a policy combining a U.S. pledge to meet its treaty commitments and provide a nuclear shield for America's Asian allies, while at the same time emphasizing Asian self-reliance.

Agnew today completed the first part of his trip and flew to neutralist Nepal after visits to four firm U.S. allies—the Philippines, South Vietnam, Nationalist China and Thailand.

In each country, government leaders questioned him closely about what the United States is going to do. In each, he has given the same firm reply—that the United States plans to remain an Asian power and keep its commitments, but that they must take more of the burden of their defense.

American officials in Bangkok told newsmen they thought part of the problem has been that the doctrine indicates more of a change in emphasis than in basic policy. An Agnew aide termed it more a change in tone. The difference, he said, is that when Nixon and Agnew talk about Asian self-reliance, they mean it.

"It's a matter of giving teeth to the platitudes," he said.

This approach appears to have been especially successful in Thailand. Thai officials made clear to Agnew they believe

GIs Claim Military Muzzle

SAIGON (AP) — Two GI newscasters relieved of their duties for accusing the U.S. Command of censorship said today they have been ordered not to discuss the case publicly.

"I have been given a direct order by Col. Robert Cook, the inspector general (of the U.S. Command), not to discuss any aspect of this case until the investigation is completed," said Spec. 5 Robert Lawrence, 27, of Atlanta, Ga.

The other broadcaster for the armed forces network, Marine Cpl. Thomas M. Sinkovitz, 21, of Harrisburg, Pa., said he also had been told not to discuss the investigation.

Lawrence was muzzled after telling newsmen in detail about being questioned Sunday and his objections because he was not allowed a lawyer.

Today a military lawyer was with him when he was questioned.

Sinkovitz said he had received legal advice during his interrogation but had not retained an attorney.

Lawrence made the censorship charge at the end of his regular 11 p.m. newscast Saturday night on the armed forces network. He claimed that the network's broadcasters were "not free to tell the truth."

Sinkovitz followed Lawrence with a sports report and in a preliminary remark said: "Thank you, Bob, in more ways than one." He told newsmen later that he meant the remark as a "complete endorsement" of Lawrence's statements.

Both men were relieved of their duties.

The U.S. Command said it was investigating Lawrence's broadcast "to decide if there was any violation of a military regulation." It said it would have no comment on the newscaster's charge until the investigation was completed.

Lawrence said in a statement that he and eight other members of the news staff had signed a letter asking the network for a clear definition of censorship policy. He said the request "was totally ignored," but of the nine he was the only one still assigned to the network news department.

He also charged that "significant network news reports concerning the Vietnamese government, a local peace demonstration and black market activities in Saigon recently were banned" from the network. He said he had also been told he could not select film for the war portions of his telecasts because his choices were unfavorable to the South Vietnamese government.

Although advised by superior officers not to discuss the case while the inspector general's inquiry was going on, Lawrence told newsmen he was questioned off and on for four hours Sunday before the officers involved yielded to his request for a lawyer and recessed the interrogation.

Sinkovitz was questioned for the first time today.

Lawrence, a radio station manager in civilian life who has 5½ months left on a three-year Army enlistment, was praised today by one of Saigon's two English-language newspapers.

Ann Landers

Extremes Can Be Harmful To Kids

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the mother who doesn't know what to say to her children because her in-laws never bring a gift when they come to visit—which is every Sunday afternoon.

I would love to trade places with her. My in-laws have spoiled our children rotten. It is disgusting the way our kids have grown to expect a gift from every person who walks into the house. When the paper boy came to collect yesterday, our 4-year-old asked, "What did you bring me?"

Our children are so bored with their toys it makes me sick. They've seen every gadget and game on the market. My father-in-law is going on an African safari in March. The kids have asked for a baby elephant. I'm scared to death he'll bring them one.

Both my husband and I have pleaded with them to stop with the presents already but they say, "It's OUR pleasure. Don't deprive us."

I hope the mother who wrote to criticize her in-laws for coming empty handed will see this letter and feel better. — Longview, Washington

Dear Long: So do I. Children who suffer from excesses are invariably more insecure and possess less self-esteem than the economically disadvantaged. Some of the most destructive and violent students come from affluent homes. Many were raised by permissive parents who smothered them with things, things and more things.

These unhappy kids feel cheated and bought-off and are registering their resentment by rejecting every symbol of authority.

Dear Ann Landers: I was intrigued by the letter from the married man who wrote to say he had an illicit love affair—that his wife knew, but remained silent and bore up nobly until he got the "foolishness" out of his system. Lover boy concluded that everyone profited. He said he had learned a lot from it, appreciated his wife more than ever, and, he added, "No one was hurt." Well, that's his opinion. I was the other woman and here's how it looked to me:

I had just gone through a tragic emotional experience and this man entered my life as a friend, a confidant. He said he was separated from his wife and asked me to marry him as soon as his divorce was final. He introduced me to his "sister" with whom he was sharing an apartment. "Sis" turned out to be a sweetheart. It was she who wised me up, after several martinis. It seems my friend spent four nights a week with his wife and family and three nights with "Sis." When I learned the truth I attempted suicide, and nearly succeeded.

I am now trying to recover from a complete breakdown and an acute case of self-hate. I am disgusted, ashamed and feel as though I will never again be able to trust a man. Would you agree that "no one was hurt?"—Miss Fruitcake of 1969

Dear Miss: Thanks for writing. Your letter is "must reading" for all married men who think they are bringing joy into the life of an emotionally starved girl.

Dear Ann Landers: In your column you sometimes use highly descriptive adjectives. The most recent was "raw" sex. How is raw sex different from cooked sex, or rare sex? When is sex well done? Can it be over done?

I await your answer.—Gourmet in Colorado.

Dear Colorado: As any gourmet knows, tastes vary. What one connoisseur considers well done, might be termed over done by another. According to Webster's unabridged—raw means "crude, undressed, uncultivated." I can't improve on THAT.

Safe Driving, Walking Title Goes To Women

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Women are not only safer drivers than men—they are also better pedestrians. Men are involved in 7 out of every 10 fatal pedestrian accidents.

Each year some 20,000 Americans become victims of amnesia. I forget why.

Do you have any legal proof of where and when you were born? About one in every 10 Americans doesn't.

The Census Bureau is one federal government department that is trying to cut down on its paper work. Back in 1880 individuals had to answer more than 200 questions. This year most of us—about 80 per cent—will be asked only 23 questions.

Among the general U.S. population the suicide rate of women is less than a third of that of men. Lady doctors, however, are twice as likely to take their own lives as male doctors.

Lost status: Garbage is a word that has gone downhill through the centuries. In medieval times, "garbage" was the name of a mixed dish of chicken heads, feet and innards which chefs stewed and offered as a special delicacy. What housewife would put a mixture like that on the front burner today?

Quotable notables: "Great poetry is always written by somebody straining to go beyond what he can do."—Stephen Spender.

Whether we like it or not, television has become a major educational factor among the young. It is estimated that in homes with preschool children the video set is turned on an average of 50 hours a week. A kid entering the first grade has already probably spent as much time looking at television programs as he will spend in classrooms during his first five school years.

Worth remembering: "What this country really needs is a credit card that will fit in a vending machine."—George Jessel.

Dog Takes To Trees Like Cat

KINGMAN, Kan. (AP)—Marvin Krehbiel isn't a bit surprised when someone tells him his dog is up a tree.

The dog is a 20-month-old English Setter named Penny, which Krehbiel describes as "a real good retriever."

Krehbiel, his wife and his daughter Peggy, 15, concede that Penny probably first climbed the tree in her pen on the Krehbiel farm in order to cool off—not to flush birds.

Penny's first climb came on a hot, muggy day last July. Mrs. Krehbiel went out to feed the dog and could hear her but couldn't find her. Finally, following the sound, she looked up and there, 12 feet above her, was Penny.

The dog apparently would have liked to come down to be fed, but, unfortunately, she had only learned to climb up trees. She spent the afternoon in the tree until Krehbiel came home and helped her down.

Next afternoon Penny again was stuck in the tree and again made it to the ground with Krehbiel's help.

Finally, on the third day of her acrobatic performance, the dog was scooting up and down the tree like a (pardon the expression) cat, except Penny climbs down head-first.

Now that's cold, Krehbiel believes Penny continues to climb the tree in order to gain a better vantage point.

In her six months of climbing the tree, Penny has worn the bark smooth. Yet she has fallen only three times, each time in the rain when the bark was wet and slippery.

Narcotics Suspect Released on Bond

Richard Carl Simons, 22; Camdenton, has been released on $5,000 bond after his arrest Tuesday for illegal possession and transfer of narcotics (marijuana).

Simons was arrested by Sedalia police for investigation after a mechanic at Fitzwilliam Motors noticed a jar with suspicious contents under the back seat of Simons' car while doing some repair work. Following an investigation, Simons was turned over to the Pettis County Sheriff's Department and was arrested by Sheriff Emmett Fairfax for illegal possession and transfer of narcotics.

A preliminary Magistrate Court hearing for Simons has been set for Jan. 12.

To Ask For Release of Hess

BERLIN (AP)—The United States, Britain and France will ask again that the Kremlin agree to release Rudolf Hess, the one-time deputy of Adolf Hitler.

But the timing of such a move depends a great deal on Hess' health, particularly his response to hospital treatment of a bleeding ulcer. If surgery becomes necessary, the allied request could come soon, regardless of political reasons for going slow.

The political factors include an allied dialogue with Moscow on Berlin tension, and other East-West contacts. But there is a growing international clamor to release Hess on humanitarian grounds.

When the request comes, it will be the 19th time the allies have asked the Soviet Union to let Hess go free.

Hess, now 75, has been in Berlin's Spandau war crimes prison since receiving a life sentence at Nuernberg in 1946. On Nov. 24 he was moved to the British military hospital.

All three allies—but particularly Britain in whose West Berlin sector he is held—want Hess released so that the problem of his confinement can be eliminated. He is the sole remaining prisoner in the four-power prison. There is also the possibility that Hess could die in prison or the hospital and "no one wants that," one source said.

Soviet refusal to free Hess is based on three points:

1. They wanted Hess sentenced to death at Nuernberg and have not changed their minds.

2. Hess is the last symbol of conquered Nazi Germany still in custody.
3. They say that when Hess flew to Britain in 1941, he sought peace so Hitler could have a free hand against Russia.

In his own way, Hess sees his role as the sole captive of four powerful nations as symbolism of another sort: lingering testimony to the powerful role in world affairs Germany once played.

Defense Officials Call Volunteer Force 'Unreal'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even before it reports, certain key defense officials consider a presidential commission's proposals for an all-volunteer military force will be unrealistic.

These officials base their judgment on reports the panel's recommendations will stress higher pay for lower tank servicemen while recommending cancellation or reduction of fringe benefits.

According to their view, the commission has paid too little attention to retaining men beyond their first enlistment.

The commission, headed by former Defense Secretary Thomas Gates, meets late this week to complete action on its report and forward its recommendations to President Nixon.

In advance of that action, a top member of the commission said the 15-member group has agreed an all-volunteer Army of about 2.5 million men should be established at an estimated cost of an additional $2 billion to $4 billion a year.

Before President Nixon began Vietnam troop withdrawals and total U.S. military manpower stood at 3.5 million men, the government estimated the yearly cost at $41 billion.

The commission cost figure is one of the lowest ever cited by those who have studied the problem.

Last July, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird told a group of government interns the extra cost of a volunteer force, as opposed to the current draft-based military structure, "certainly... will be in the area of around $8 billion."

Studies during the Johnson administration concluded it would cost as much as $17 billion more a year to support an all-volunteer force at the pre-Vietnam war level.

Some Pentagon authorities suggest the presidential commission is trying to solve the problem too cheaply.

Dean William H. Meckling of the University of Rochester, executive director of the commission, indicated last week much of the additional cost in raising an all-volunteer force would go to push up the pay of men in the lower ranks.

Evidently, the idea is to attract men into the service for the first time with more pay.

The commission staff has been reported to have proposed raising the pay of first-term enlistees as much as 100 per cent, with a figure of $5,500 a year mentioned as a desired level.

The commission also has been considering follow-up enlistments without any specific term. Thus, a soldier agreeing to stay on after first enlistment would not serve any set term but, like officers, would remain in uniform until asking to resign or retire.

However, veteran military manpower experts say the already serious problem of retaining enlisted men for military careers would be aggravated, rather than helped, by commission proposals.

Unless there also was significantly higher pay all along the line, veteran servicemen—particularly vital noncommissioned officers—might feel discriminated against and be less likely to stay on duty.

Reported commission proposals to cut out or cut down on post housing for military families and medical care for military dependents in post hospitals also are considered by some Pentagon authorities as actually harmful to the concept of an all-volunteer force.

Under commission recommendations the loss of fringe benefits would be offset somewhat by salary increases.

The apparent aim of the commission in eliminating or trimming fringe benefits is to bring servicemen closer to the mainstream of civilian life.

Crime in the Capital Reaches New Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Murder, rape and robbery reached an all-time high in the nation's capital in 1969 and many Washington law enforcement officers say there will be no slowdown until Congress acts and court attitudes change.

Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson released charts labeled to show that crime turned upward here in 1963 after investigative arrests were stopped and accelerated even faster after the Supreme Court decision in the Escobedo case in 1964 and the Miranda case in 1966.

These decisions established strict rules regarding questioning, arrests and subsequent interrogation of suspects and the manner in which confessions could be taken and used in court.

For the district police officer, Washington's Bail Reform Act is a major headache.

"It's murder," one officer said.

The act makes it mandatory that the court release the accused on his own recognizance, if unable to post bail, if he has ties in the community. A recent court decision prohibits the court from considering the suspect's danger to the community.

Clogged criminal courts have caused some judges to dismiss cases, another officer said, and he cited the instance where a prosecution witness was not immediately available and the "judge dismissed the case and a stickup man walked out scot-free."

Many officers who feel courts have been too lenient in the past point to what happened in 1969 when bank robberies decreased drastically.

Last January 19 financial institutions were robbed; then a bank robber was sentenced to 45 years-to-life and another one had his bail fixed at $250,000. Statistics released by Wilson show that bank robberies dropped to two the next month. At year's end the bank robbery total stood at only 50 compared with 102 in 1968.

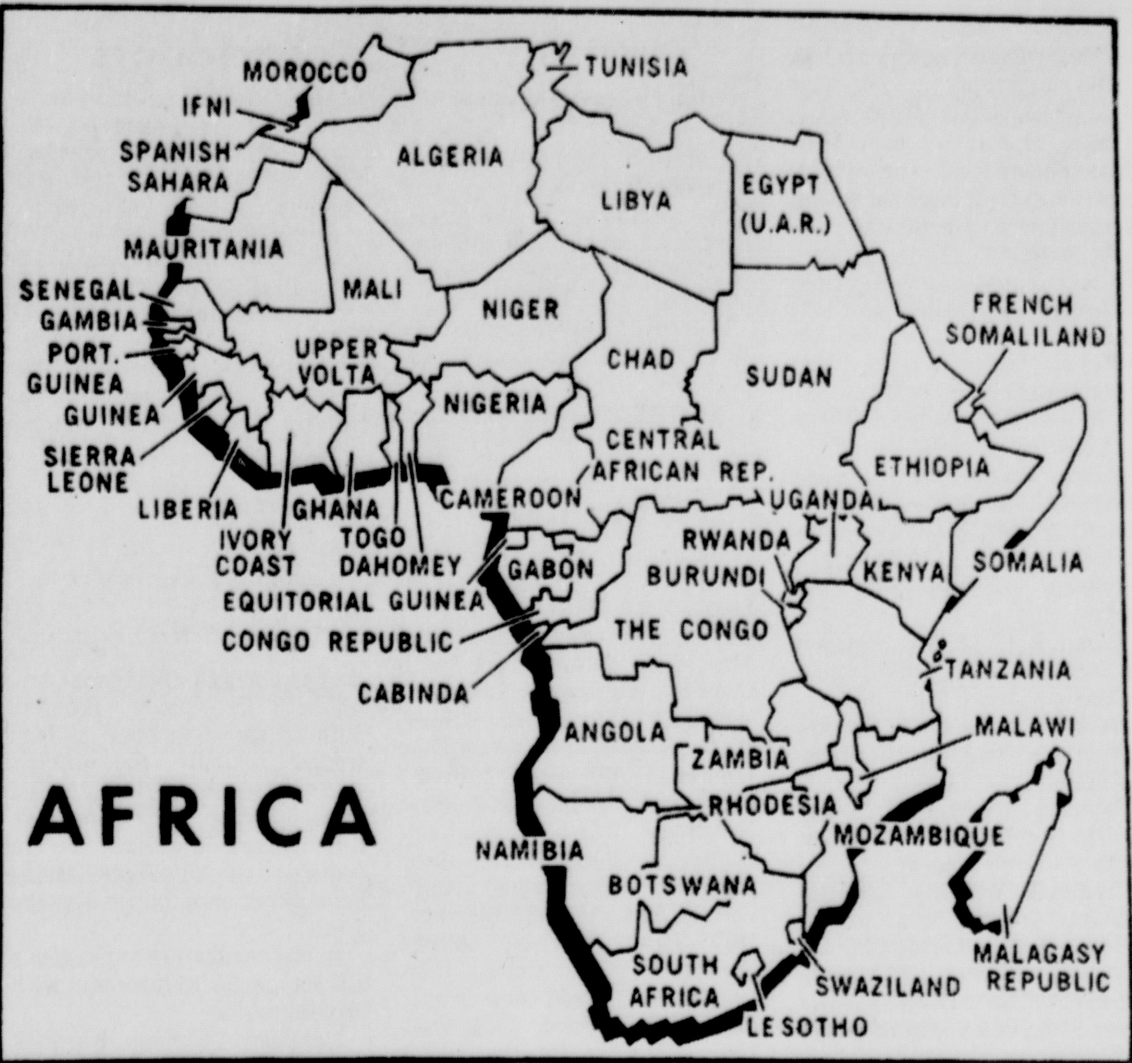

President Nixon's proposed legislation for controlling crime in the District, already approved by the Senate, is awaiting action in the House.

Airport Crash Claims One Life

COLLINSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Clyde Rozzell, 45, of Cahokia, Ill., was killed Sunday when his light plane collided with another as both were attempting to land at the Collinsville Airport.

The other pilot, Darryl Smith, 31, of Route 2, Tarry, Ill., was critically injured. Both men were flying single-engine Cessna 150s.

State Police said the Rozzell plane plummeted onto U.S. business route 40 in front of the airport and blocked traffic for a time. The Smith plane struck a car on a parking lot.

Tax Committee Will Investigate Referendum Try

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—A committee fighting a referendum on the 1969 income tax law has decided to investigate further before determining whether to bring a lawsuit in an effort to invalidate the referendum petitions.

Rep. E. J. Cantrell, D-Overland, appointed a subcommittee Sunday headed by Nolan Miller of Arnold to review the facts about the petitions and make a recommendation on the possibility of legal action.

Cantrell said Sen. Richard Southern, D-Monroe City, and some other committee members felt it might be better to campaign among the voters to defeat the referendum.

When Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, filed the referendum petitions he claimed they contained more than 162,000 signatures, far more than the approximately 62,000 needed to get the issue on the ballot at a special election expected to be called in April.

Cantrell has challenged this claim, however, and says he has found numerous irregularities in the signatures, including a number of forgeries.

Under the law, as set out by an opinion of Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth last week, Secy. of State James C. Kirpatrick has only ministerial duties in counting the signatures and has no right to investigate their validity.

Harvey L. Pace, 702 North Stewart, is a patient at Calloway Memorial Hospital, Fulton. He suffered a broken leg from a fall on the ice.

Police Report

William O. Hiatt, 1609 East Ninth, reported the theft of 40 Christmas lights from his yard about 8 p.m. Sunday.

Don A. Weaver, Otterville, reported the theft of a .30-caliber rifle from his pickup truck while it was parked at Jimmie's Lounge on West Broadway Saturday night. The police report indicated that the truck was unlocked at the time of the theft.

The New Orleans police department notified Sedalia Police Sunday morning they had recovered a car stolen in Sedalia.

The car, a 1967 Dodge Charger owned by William K. Schilb, Jr., 2232 West Second Street Terrace, was stolen from the above address on Dec. 10.

Three men and a juvenile girl were reported to have been in the car when it was apprehended. Ronnie Hays, 18, was listed as the driver of the car.

Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said charges would be filed as soon as the investigation is complete.

City Council Meets Tonight

The opening of bids on workmen's compensation insurance for city employees will highlight tonight's City Council meeting.

City Clerk Ralph Dedrick said ordinances for four no-parking zones in the city will probably be considered by the council. Included in the four zones recommended by the Traffic Advisory Committee is 10th Street between Massachusetts and the M-K-T Railroad tracks.

This area has been the point of much criticism from residents around Smith-Cotton High School who complain they have no parking places while school is in session because of students' cars.

Accidents

A hit-and-run accident occurred in the 600 block of East Broadway at 7:44 p.m. Sunday.

Involved were a 1967 Chevrolet driven west on Broadway by Albert L. Moore, 44, Route 2, and an unidentified vehicle.

Moore told police he felt an impact, pulled over and the other car stopped then left the scene.

The right rear of the Chevrolet was damaged.

they can handle their own Communist insurgency problem without the assistance of U.S. troops. Actually, the officials said, the United States started implementing something like the Nixon doctrine several years ago when it stopped flying helicopters into battle for the Thais.

In Nationalist China, Agnew's efforts appear to have met with mixed results.

President Chiang Kai-shek and Agnew got on so well that Chiang accompanied Agnew to the airport to wish him a good trip despite the fact that the vice president's message of continued U.S. efforts to normalize relations with Red China was displeasing to the 82-year-old leader.

And after Agnew's departure, one of Taipei's leading newspapers, the China News, complained that the Nixon Doctrine "has never been spelled out in detail." It added that while the United States has offered its help, "the nature and the amount of the help are not defined."

Some of the confusion in Asian minds appears to stem from the way in which the doctrine emerged. President Nixon met with reporters on Guam to give some of his ideas at the start of his Asian trip, but they were not allowed to quote him directly.

What he outlined quickly became known as the Nixon Doctrine, but there was no set definition. Nixon then went to Thailand and indicated possible U.S. support against both external and internal aggression, a contradiction with his stated intent of staying out of civil war situations.

Members of Agnew's party give still another reason for the confusion—that the Asian leaders don't want to face up to a situation where they will be able to lean less and less on the United States.

American officials in at least two countries, the Philippines and Thailand, see confusion resulting from statements by U.S. senators indicating a weakening of the U.S. commitment, and from passage of the amendment barring U.S. ground combat troops from Laos or Thailand without expressed congressional approval.

Officials explained that this, too, is largely a semantic exercise because the U.S. commitment under the Southeast Asian Treaty Organization provides that it will act in accordance with its constitutional processes in helping one of its allies.

Senate

"The South Vietnamese government tried to cover up its responsibilities concerning a massacre of many civilians right in our national territory by issuing a short statement," it added.

The Defense Ministry had said on Nov. 22 that reports of a massacre were "completely inaccurate," and that 20 to 25 civilians had been accidentally killed by U.S. bombs and artillery.

"In this case the responsibility must shift to the president," the report said. "The president must bear the entire responsibility before history and the people."

The report was based on interviews with Vietnamese claiming to have witnessed the alleged massacre and documents gathered by a joint legislative investigation over the past two months.

Don, who is regarded as Thieu's leading critic in Parliament, is a former general who helped lead the 1963 coup that overthrew President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Meanwhile, two investigations are being conducted by U.S. military officials.

One, headed by Lt. Gen. William R. Peers, seeks to determine whether the incident was covered up by field commanders. Also the military lawyers who will defend and prosecute Calley arrived in Vietnam to gather information for his court-martial.

Peers completed his investigation in the area around My Lai today after interviewing three South Vietnamese national policemen who were in the hamlet at the time of the alleged massacre.

Judge Hayes Is Endorsed By Bar Group

A resolution endorsing Circuit Judge Frank Hayes for re-election was passed by the Pettis County Bar Association Monday.

Judge Hayes' 18th Judicial Circuit covers Pettis and Cooper Counties. He filed for election to his third term Dec. 15, and was unanimously endorsed by the Cooper County Bar Association on Dec. 18.

At age 73, Hayes will be running for his third six-year term in November's election.

Following his endorsement Monday morning, Hayes said he works with the "two best bar associations in the state."

Scheduling Is Creating Low Ratings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — There is so much quiet charm and warmth packed into CBS' "To Rome, With Love" that it seems a pity it is scheduled opposite NBC's powerful "Wonderful World of Disney."

Given a chance, the half hour might build the same kind of audience achieved by "Family Affair."

Sunday night's episode was typical of the gentle and low-key humor of the series. Attractive and believable John Forsythe plays a widowed professor teaching and living in Rome with his three young daughters.

The program had the first romantic overtones of the series — the professor's chance encounter, in a library, with a beautiful Italian woman played by Anna Maria Alberghetti, who turns out to be a famous ballerina. The romantic interlude ended when the girl left for an American tour.

Forsythe plays his part with maturity, sympathy and understanding. Other characters in the series are three very cute children. Joyce Menges, playing the oldest, had a pleasant bit as a romance-minded teen-ager urging her father to swing a little in the Eternal City.

The series also has the valuable services of Kay Medford whose comedy talents are not, alas, even faintly visible in the sour-faced role of Aunt Harriet, the professor's sister. She plays a sulky, homesick woman from the Midwest who constantly mourns that in Rome there is no American peanut butter, chunky style, in the markets, and who hates Italian shopping bags.

The other competition is ABC's "Land of Giants," a one-dimensional adventure series. Once the viewer has ceased being amused at the ingenious props of telephones the size of a small room and pencils that look as long as telephone poles, the hour is likely to become a bore. It consists of wild adventures of a band of earthlings stranded on a planet of English-speaking, contemporary humans—most of them bad guys—who are about 18 times the size of the hunted aliens.

It seems likely that in view of the weak ratings of "To Rome, With Love" and "Land of the Giants" neither will be around after this season. The former does seem worth saving.

Now that king football's retirement from TV's stage center is upon us, some other sports will start having their weekends of glory. CBS' "Golf Classic" series starts Jan. 10; NBC's "Wonderful of Golf" begins a week later. ABC will resume with its "Pro Bowlers" tour" on Jan. 10. Basketball and hockey will also be given a network whirl.

New Year's Baby Is Contest Winner

Robert Lee Nix, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Nix, 1209 West Fifth, is the winner of the First Baby of the Year Contest, sponsored by the Democrat-Capital for Pettis County residents.

The infant was born at 8:30 a.m. New Year's Day at Bothwell Hospital.

The Nixes will receive an estimated $125 in merchandise for themselves and their newborn son.

Wisconsin School Plagued by Trouble

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The office of the University of Wisconsin's primates laboratory has been seized by a firebomb in what police speculated was the latest incident in a weeklong antimilitary spree.

The fire Sunday caused only minor damage.

In the most serious incident, the Old Red Gym, headquarters of the campus Reserve Officers Training Corps, was virtually destroyed by firebombing Saturday.

Police speculated that the firebomb which hit the laboratory was intended for a draft board office across the street.

Better Records

Each year about this time many families wish they had better income tax figures and an easier way of keeping their farm records.

In the Show-Me Area in 1969 there are five families in Lafayette enrolled in the Mail-In-Record program at the University of Missouri, 22 in Pettis, 12 in Johnson and 11 from Henry County.

At tax time these families appreciate the three copies of their complete description for IRS. Also, they value the condensed grouping and totals for each item of income and expense for their income tax returns.

After 2-3 years in the program these families are able to pin point the "leaks" in their farm business. Some are looking for ways to cut down on expenses or reduce the labor load. The analysis of their farm business comes to them in April with 130 answers relating how they did the year before. They are able to compare their results with 400 other families enrolled statewide. Some are starting to keep brief record of income and expense on each class of livestock to determine which one is supporting the business.

If you have wanted a better picture of your farming operation, Lloyd Lewellen, Area Farm Management Agent, working with Mail-In-Records, invites you to visit any of the 50 Mail-In-Record families and leave your name at your Extension Center.

Tree Order

The Pettis County Extension Center is now accepting orders for seedling trees and shrubs to be planted next spring. These seedlings, grown by the Missouri Department of Conservation, are sold at low cost to persons desiring to make conservation plantings. Examples of eligible plantings are: forest, wildlife, erosion control, windbreak and Christmas tree plantings. Seedlings may not be used for ornamental or landscaping purposes.

You should place orders as soon as possible because reservations for trees are made on a "first come, first served" basis. The trees are delivered to Sedalia in the spring at the proper planting time.

Persons planning to make large plantings may request free advice from the Missouri Department of Conservation's farm forester, James Rocca, Clinton, Missouri. Orders are placed through the Extension office, 1104 South Grand.

Aluminum or Copper

Electrical wires, like most other materials used on a farm, will give the best service when properly selected and installed. Today we see and hear of the use of both aluminum and copper electrical conductors. The question is which should be used.

Copper has been the industry standby and has proven itself dependable. Because of the cost of copper and the aggressiveness of the aluminum industry, aluminum is now available. Either material is a good conductor of electricity. Size for size, however, for most farm and home wiring, aluminum should be selected one size larger than copper.

In any selected size of conductor, aluminum will weigh about one-third as much as copper. On a cost per pound basis, copper costs about twice as much as aluminum.

Purchase cost is not the only consideration which should be made, however. Copper connections are easily made and are not deteriorated by normal farm and home conditions. Aluminum connections must be carefully made. Connectors for aluminum must be designed for aluminum for dependability. Aluminum will cold flow under pressure and connections often loosen. Aluminum to copper connections not only cold flow, but often corrode and fail.

Some aluminum is available and is being used for interior wiring. When used, larger outlet and junction boxes are required because larger conductors are necessary. Because of the larger conductors, larger boxes and possibly greater labor, copper may still prove more economical.

For long runs, either overhead or underground, aluminum may be more economical.

Man is Burned

In Hotel Blaze

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A man was burned severely in a fire in his room at the Hotel Phillips Sunday night less than an hour after he had registered.

The victim, Ed James of Kansas City, was listed in critical condition with burns over 40 per cent of his body.

He was rescued from the blazing room by a bellman, Jack M. Garrison, 46.

"The smoke was so thick I could hardly see," Garrison said, "but the flames lit the room enough so I could see him lying on the floor. I went in and pulled him out by the arm."

Firemen said they did not know what started the fire, which was confined to the one room on the 13th floor.

High Dive

Injures Man

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A 25-year-old man dived head first through a window of his second floor apartment early Sunday and landed on the sidewalk below, apparently with only minor injuries, police said.

Patrolmen James Aliff and Gary Buchanan, sent to the apartment to settle a domestic quarrel, said they were trying to calm the man when he suddenly took the high dive.

The man was treated at General Hospital, then was placed in the Psychiatric Receiving Center.

Farm Roundup

Farm Exports Rebounding After 1968-69 Low Ebb

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department says farm exports have picked up in recent months and for the year ending June 30 may total more than $6 billion after slumping to a six-year low in 1968-69.

"Exports should benefit from improved economic activity in a number of industrial countries," said the Foreign Agricultural Service in a report today, "notably Japan and those in Western Europe."

Officials said farm shipments to Japan during last July-Oct. rose 27 per cent from a year earlier. All U.S. farm exports during the period totaled $2,056 billion, a gain of nine per cent from a year earlier.

"This increase resulted primarily from a larger export value of fruits and vegetables, feedgrains, oilseeds and products, and tobacco, the report said. Shipments of cotton, wheat and flour were less."

But officials said export prices for many commodities including wheat, soybeans and protein meal "are now more competitive and probably will remain so" during the remainder of the year.

But the FAS said keener competition among large grain-exporting nations will tend to keep U.S. wheat exports from rising greatly.

The report said also that a "disquieting feature of international farm trade in 1968-69 was a trend toward more protectionism" which has restricted U.S. export growth, particularly in the European Common Market.

Officials said that at more than $6 billion this fiscal year U.S. farm exports would be "considerably higher" than the $5.7 billion of 1968-69 and more than the 1961-65 average of $5.5 billion annually. The peak year was 1966-67 when farm exports totaled $6.8 billion, thus meaning a drop of $1.1 billion in sales within a two-year span ending last June 30.

The report failed to point out that U.S. farm exports totaled more than $6 billion annually from 1962-63 to last year.

One of the objectives of the Nixon administration is to get farm exports back on a firm footing despite the rising competition on the world market for some of the biggest commodities, particularly wheat.

Administration officials have argued that some U.S. crops have been artificially priced too high under government price support loan programs for excess production to move freely into world trade.

Thus it is one of the aims of the administration in seeking new farm legislation to have price supports adjusted at below the prevailing world market price for a particular crop.

In this way, the planners say, U.S. farmers will be able to sell more of their products on the world market and rely less on government price supports.

New RFC Proponents Will Test the Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—Proponents of a "new Reconstruction Finance Corporation" to improve the supply of scarce and expensive credit plan to test congressional sentiment soon after lawmaking resumes Jan. 19.

Principal sponsor of the plan is Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee and long-time advocate of low interest rates and easy credit.

He proposed in a speech Nov. 3 creation of a National Development Bank, patterned to some extent after the Depression-era Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It would provide credit for housing and investments in depressed areas, among other possibilities.

Patman's proposal initially aroused little reaction in Congress, where the banking committee chairman is regarded by many as a persistent advocate of far-out financial schemes.

But a few days after adjournment, the Housing Department boosted the maximum interest rate on government-backed housing loans to a record 8½ per cent, plus the one-half per cent insurance charge.

Although the department said it moved reluctantly because of market imperatives, critics said the move threatened to price out of the market not only seekers of low-cost housing but many average income potential buyers.

Patman immediately announced his committee will give priority attention to the National Development Bank, among other proposals to provide housing credit.

By invoking the memory of the RFC he is apparently angling for bipartisan support.

Although RFC is largely associated with Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal, it actually came into being under Herbert Hoover, more than a year before Roosevelt took office.

In its nearly 22 years of existence, RFC pumped out more than $12 billion credit, an impressive figure in a time of high dollar purchasing power.

Patman proposed the National Development Bank be initially capitalized with $1 billion stock subscribed by the Treasury.

President Relaxing After Rush

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—With major budget decisions behind him, President Nixon relaxed today at a posh estate in this desert resort community.

Accompanied by Mrs. Nixon and their daughter Tricia, the President flew by helicopter Sunday morning to the luxurious vacation home of Walter H. Annenberg, U.S. ambassador to Britain.

Relaxation was Nixon's principal objective, although he brought along a briefcase filled with papers. Two key aides, Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman and Appointments Secretary Dwight Chapin, are staying nearby.

Although Nixon continues to prepare for his Jan. 22 State of the Union message to Congress, he announced Saturday he had completed all major decisions on the budget he will send to Congress late in the month for the 1971 fiscal year that begins July 1.

The Palm Springs weather was pleasant and sunny but not appreciably warmer than in seaside San Clemente 100 miles west where Nixon has been spending most of his New Year's holiday in his own home.

The chief executive spent most of Sunday afternoon in the modern-style Annenberg home, which is reported to have more than 30,000 square feet of living space.

Mrs. Nixon sat by the pool while her husband was indoors watching the Kansas City Chiefs win the televised American Football League championship game from the Oakland Raiders 17-7.

More Arrests Probable In Gambling Probe

DETROIT (AP)—Federal attorneys say there may be more arrests this week in a probe of an alleged nationwide gambling ring involving well known sports personalities.

U.S. Dist. Atty. James H. Brickley said Sunday "It is likely there will be further arrests in this case. I will not speculate on the number or where."

No sports figures were among 10 persons arrested in Michigan and Nevada New Year's Day, but one federal attorney said statements and records seized "indicate a national scheme involving famous figures in baseball and football and hundreds of trainers and jockeys at race tracks."

Those arrested were charged with using interstate communication facilities for gambling and with conspiring to violate federal gambling laws. They were freed on bond.

Federal agents also searched the Las Vegas hotel room of one-time pitching great and television broadcaster Jerome "Dizzy" Dean. Dean was not arrested.

Brickley declined to comment on a published report that more than 150 subpoenas would be issued to gamblers and sports leaders to appear before a U.S. grand jury in Detroit.

IRS Investigating An Oil Firm's Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP)—A major oil company's expenses in fighting the recently enacted tax reform bill have come under scrutiny of the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS action results from a complaint by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who contended Shell Oil Co. forced its employees to attend "brain-washing" sessions giving the company's view of oil depletion and oil imports.

Proxmire said he expected Shell would try to deduct the cost of the sessions—which he termed lobbying—as business expenses. He said this clearly would be in violation of tax codes.

In a letter made public by Proxmire, the Internal Revenue service wrote him:

"The facts... are not sufficiently detailed to form the basis of any firm conclusion on the matter. However, we agree with you that if these activities do in fact constitute lobbying within the meaning of the applicable statute, the fact that the lobbying is directed to employees would not convert it to a deductible expenditure."

The IRS added that the complaint requires a finding of act and the matter is being referred to the district director having jurisdiction over Shell.

When asked for comment, a Shell executive referred to a statement issued by the company when Proxmire made the complaint in October. The company responded then:

"Because of the present number of issues of extraordinary importance which could substantially affect the oil business, and the people who work in it, we felt it desirable to acquaint our employees with our views on these issues. We believe that we have a right and, indeed, a duty to do so."

The tax reform bill, signed into law Tuesday by President Nixon, included numerous provisions which the oil industry vigorously opposed.

It lowered the mineral depletion allowance from 27½ to 22 per cent, applied a new 10 per cent income tax to otherwise sheltered earnings and knocked out other tax benefits by holding production payments to be loans instead of income.

Proxmire has also complained to IRS about the activities of seven other oil companies against the new tax bill.

These companies—whose officials, Proxmire said, contacted employees or stockholders suggesting they write friends and congressmen—are Texaco, Cities Service, Phillips Petroleum, Mobil Oil, Sun Oil, Conoco and Standard Oil.

The IRS has not yet responded to these complaints.

Play at Postal Politics

Not much has been heard about postal reform since Congress gave notice that while it may be a nice subject to discuss, there really isn't much interest in doing anything about it.

After years of deteriorating service accompanied by much complaint but little action, a real possibility of reorganizing the mails to meet increasing demands developed during the waning years of the Johnson administration with former Postmaster General Lawrence O'Brien's plan to take the Post Office out of the cabinet and revamp it as a semi-autonomous federal agency. The plan would give the postal service considerable powers independent of Congress—in short, take it out of politics—with the eventual goal of not only providing better service, but paying its own way.

The Nixon administration bought most of the O'Brien package. But Congress, with a traditional patronage stake in the nation's 26,000 postmasterships, and the postal unions, more comfortable in bargaining with a vote-conscious Congress than a less impressionable agency, have not. Strongly opposed by the unions, the proposals never made it out of committee on Capitol Hill.

A more limited reform measure, merely permitting the president to name postmasters without confirmation, also died in Congress.

In an unpublicized but very effective way, the administration apparently is saying more on the subject, however. During his first year in office, President Nixon has not named a single postmaster. As a result, there are now a reported 3,500 vacancies due to normal attrition from death and retirement.

This, of course, much to the chagrin of patronage-hungry Congress.

To take the mails out of politics, the President seems to be taking a deviously very, very political route.

Matter of Dollars and Rubles

After years of waging word wars with Soviet propagandists over the air waves, the United States Information Agency is now proposing a deal with the enemy.

As a matter of common economic if not ideological interest, it has suggested that Moscow cease jamming Voice of America broadcasts to the Soviet Union. Jamming, around since the beginning of the Cold War, had gone out of style for a number of years until the invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. Since then, Moscow has been throwing up an electronic barrage against VOA transmissions in Russian, Ukrainian, Armenian and other Soviet languages.

The USIA argument is that such interference is both expensive and self-defeating. The United States simply counters Soviet jamming by increasing the power of VOA transmissions, and the American message still gets through. All Moscow and Washington really have to show for their efforts is money spent that both could find better uses for elsewhere.

The USIA suggestion to call off the electronic duel makes practical sense. But considering the ways of world politics, that is one good reason why it doesn't stand a chance.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Foundation Payments to Politicians

WASHINGTON — The House Ways and Means Committee has received a report so embarrassing to Congressmen that Chairman Wilbur Mills is keeping it under lock and key.

Jack Anderson

At the request of Rep. James Burke, D-Mass., the Ford Foundation submitted a list of payments it has made to politicians. Insiders who saw the report before Mills locked it up say it names 40 to 50 Congressmen, not to mention dozens of governors, mayors and other political figures.

Most of the Congressmen, apparently, received travel study grants, permitting them to gallivant around the world educating themselves at the expense of the Ford Foundation.

Other politicians collected consultant fees, honorariums, even salaries. For example, the Foundation paid an aide of Cleveland's Mayor Carl Stokes fees of $50,000 and $65,000 only 120 days apart, assert the insiders, presumably to oversee Ford-financed projects in the ghettos.

Study grants have been awarded to politicians of all stripes, ranging from ex-White House aid, Joe Califano to California's Speaker Jesse Unruh. Califano was paid $12,000 for a seven-week study after he left the White House last January.

Following the murder of Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y., a compassionate Ford Foundation awarded generous grants to eight of his staff members. It may be merely a coincidence that the Foundation's president, McGeorge Bundy, himself had been a member of the Kennedy inner circle.

Both Parties Benefit—

Bundy is quick to point out that Foundation grants have been made to politicians "of both parties of very widely different views." Nevertheless, this raises some stern questions:

Looking Backward

Guess Mr. Grant will find it so...In Columbia mules from 14 to 14½ hands are selling from $65 to $75; from 14½ to 15 from $75 to $80. The market is dull and mules are low.

"It's the Same on All Channels!"

THE FAMILY LAWYER

This Way Out

Finished with her shopping, Mrs. Wilson headed for the automatic doors at the front of the market. But by mistake, she approached the IN side instead of the OUT side. Just then someone activated the IN door, which swung against Mrs. Wilson and knocked her down.

In due course, she filed a damage suit against the store.

"It is true the doors were labeled 'IN' and 'OUT,'" she said in court. "But the words were placed above eye level, where they were not easy to see. No wonder I got mixed up."

However, the court denied her claim. The judge said the store was entitled to assume that a customer would pay closer attention to where she was going.

Generally speaking, the law expects the normal shopper to be able to navigate safely out of the normal exit. As another court said, in denying damages to a tall man who bumped his head on a short door:

"The height of the doorway was obvious. It was not a source of danger to a person exercising reasonable care."

Yet, some doors are not obvious at all. A number of recent cases have involved all-glass doors, which sometimes give what the law calls "an illusion of space." Courts have usually held that if a person bumps unwittingly against such a door, the management may be held responsible.

But this applies only if the door is truly deceptive in appearance. If markings or handles give fair warning that the door is there, then the store cannot be blamed by the person who walks into it.

Whatever type of door it is, the management does have an affirmative duty to keep it in good working order. Thus:

A woman was seriously injured in a revolving door when someone speeded it around with a push. Investigation revealed that the brake brushes, which were supposed to hold the speed down, were all worn out.

Accordingly, a court ruled that the management was liable for the woman's injury. Its negligent upkeep, said the court, had changed a safe exit into a place of danger.

THE WELL CHILD

Formula for Hormone Use In Arresting Growth

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—Why do children grow so fast when they reach the age of 13 or 14?

A—Although the exact time of rapid growth varies in different persons, a sharp increase in height, starting between the ages of 11 and 13, is a physiologic phenomenon. It is largely controlled by an increase in pituitary hormone.

Q—At what age does a girl stop growing? If she has her diseased tonsils removed before she reaches her full growth will she have a better chance of growing a little taller?

A—With a few exceptions girls attain their full height when they are between 17 and 18 and boys between 18 and 19. The presence or absence of diseased tonsils would have no appreciable effect on a person's growth.

Q—My daughter, 9, is 61½ inches tall. She has always been tall for her age. One doctor advised giving her hormones to check her growth and another was against this. What do you advise?

A—This is a controversial question. Although female hormones will curb a girl's growth they will also precipitate the anxieties associated with budding sexual maturity at an age when she is ill-prepared to handle them. Those who favor the use of hormones advise that they not be given unless (1) the height of both parents is over 70 inches and (2) twice the girl's height on her second birthday also exceeds 70 inches. If you decide to use this treatment, it must be started before your daughter reaches her 12th birthday and before her bone age is 12 years.

Q—Our son, 13, is thin as a rail, 61 inches tall and still growing. He has outgrown his father and older brother. Our doctor says that his pituitary gland is overactive but not to worry about it. What do you advise?

A—Since your doctor is not unduly concerned, I assume that your son is not acromegalic (a pituitary giant). See that he gets plenty of rest because rapid growth can be exhausting. Give him a well-balanced diet so that his muscular development can catch up with his bony development. Encourage him to play basketball or tennis.

Oswald: "The weak two-bid has become almost standard in top-flight American bridge. Of course, the Dallas Aces as a whole only use two spades as weak; one pair also uses two hearts as weak and none of you play two of a minor as weak."

Jim: "I suppose you are leading up to the fact that the weak two-bid will frequently boomerang against its user."

Oswald: "Right! When you sat East, you had to pass. South opened one no-trump and played there, making three. At the other table, the California East opened with a weak two-heart bid. Billy Eisenberg had too much to pass and elected to bid an optimistic two no-trump. Bobby Goldman raised him to three and West opened the queen of diamonds."

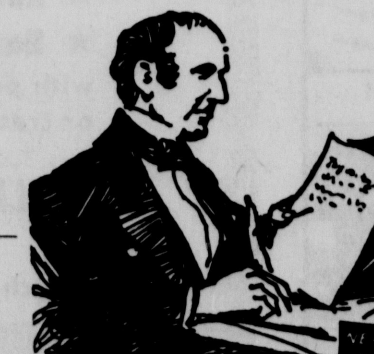

Jim: "Billy had no problem in the play. He simply won in dummy and led the 10 of spades. Since East held the queen, Billy was sure of three spades and two tricks in each other suit for a total of nine."

Oswald: "Even with the queen of spades wrong, I think Billy would have found some way to bring the game home. Incidentally, will you tell our readers just how you and Bobby and Hamman and Lawrence play the two-heart opening?"

Jim: "We play it as 12-15 or possibly 16 high-card points with five hearts and four spades. In other words, it is a minimum or near-minimum opening bid of a type we would find difficult to rebid if we opened with one heart. These hands come up quite often and the weak two-heart bid handles them well."

"The basic idea for this bid is the Flannery two-diamond invented by Bill Flannery of Pittsburgh. When are you going to adopt it?"

Oswald: "Don't know. Maybe I am too old."

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try, try again" is a quotation familiar to many people. The World Almanac recalls that the expression was originated by W. E. Hickson, in "Try and Try Again," which appeared around 1850.

A Correspondent's 1969

Action Scenes On Foreign Fronts

By EDWIN ROTH

LONDON — Because of my work, 1969 was the year when I was shot at by Egyptians beside the Suez Canal, by Jordanians in Galilee, and by Protestants in Belfast; splashed by raw eggs meant for Neo-Nazi leader Adolf von Thadden during a German election riot in Nuremberg; threatened by a non-existent bomb during New York Mayor John Lindsay's victorious election night at his Fifth Avenue headquarters; tear-gassed by Washington police while watching Vietnam Moratorium demonstrators outside the Justice Department; and fed with Communist grapes by President Nixon while a wildly enthusiastic crowd of Rumanians pushed and squeezed.

On February 25, I was in the British House of Commons press gallery when President Nixon walked to a green leather bench below the opposite gallery while Prime Minister Harold Wilson was answering questions. This made Nixon the first President of the United States who attended a British House of Commons session while in office. By the House's 700 years old traditions, no notice is taken of strangers and President Nixon was just another stranger.

Three days later I stood at Orly airport near Paris, and watched President Nixon shaking hands with General de Gaulle. The band of the French Republican Guard played a trumpet march called "To the Battlefield." No one knew then that this was the last great ceremony General de Gaulle attended as President of France.

In Berlin on March 5, I saw the election of West Germany's new President, the Social Democrat Gustav Heinemann, by an electoral college of parliamentarians and state assembly members. The Social Democrats' leader Willy Brandt, then foreign minister, invited me to a victory party in the Social Democrats' caucus hall.

I asked Willy Brandt: "Am I watching the birth of your next coalition?" Brandt motioned a waiter to give me champagne, and replied I should ask him this after the parliamentary election in September. That evening, I wrote in my Berlin hotel room: "It was very clear that a new coalition between Social Democrats and Free Democrats had been born—and might remove the conservative Christian Democratic Union from West Germany's political leadership for the first time since West Germany was founded in 1949."

Civil war broke out between Protestants and Catholics in Northern Ireland because the Protestants reacted with tremendous violence against the granting of civil rights to the Catholics. Taking cover from Protestant fire in the streets of Belfast behind the British army's armored cars, I watched Ireland's bloodiest street battles since the twenties.

I flew to Bucharest for President Nixon's dramatic visit to Rumania's leader Nicolae Ceausescu—the first visit of a U.S. President to a Communist country since Roosevelt met Stalin at Yalta in 1944.

President Nixon's reception in Bucharest reached its climax during a long walk through the biggest market, when all security measures collapsed. Holding a large bunch of grapes just given to him by a market woman, President Nixon shouted above the tremendous noise: "Taste them, they're good—just like the muscat grapes we have in Fresno, California!" This was not the moment to remember the rule never to eat unwashed fruit in Balkan countries.

From Bucharest I flew to Israel, which I had not visited since September 1967. I found the national mood there depressed because of the continuing war, but fiercely determined to make no concessions before direct peace talks are held with the Arabs.

In a very unhumorous situation, the only funny sight I saw were the white U.N. jeeps attached to gigantic blue U.N. flags, in which blue-helmeted U.N. observers risk their lives while carefully noting down every shot fired along the Suez Canal, and the exact times of the shooting. Their futile reports are then filed away somewhere in the U.N. skyscraper in New York.

I was in West Germany for the final stage of its national election battle. In Nuremberg, raw eggs splashed me during a riot caused by the Neo-Nazi leader Adolf von Thadden's attempt to hold a Neo-Nazi election meeting. But Adolf von Thadden's so-called National Democrats failed to get the 5 per cent of the total votes which are the constitutional qualification for entering the Bonn parliament. (His opponents' most effective slogan: "One Adolf was enough!")

During election night in Bonn, I watched Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger appear before a triumphant torchlight procession of supporters who believed he had won because his party got far more votes than any other party. Walter Scheel's Free Democrats had lost disastrously and had far fewer parliamentary places than in the previous election.

But Willy Brandt's Social Democratic party invited the Free Democrats to form a coalition government. Walter Scheel became foreign minister. The smallest party which had lost the election joined Brandt's government, while Kiesinger's conservative Christian Democratic Union, the largest party, went into opposition for the first time since West Germany was founded in 1949.

The two most remarkable statements made to me in 1969 were made at U.N. headquarters, and a few days later in Washington. At U.N. headquarters, U. Thant told me that in his eight years as U.N. Secretary-General he had made no mistake—not one single mistake—no mistake at all. During the "March on Washington" on November 15, the LSD apostle Dr. Timothy Leary said to me in the press enclosure below the Washington monument: "We have lysereized an entire generation."

I regard Dr. Leary's claim of having caused an entire generation to take LSD to be as true as U. Thant's claim of personal infallibility.

But the most fascinating year I spent in this immensely interesting year was that during which I watched the first men on the moon. Neil Armstrong stepped on the moon at 3:56 a.m. West European time. My London home is in Hampstead, the highest part of London, and has a very good view. As I closed a window while watching the men on the moon, I noticed that thousands of lights were burning in apartment blocks and houses—something that had never before happened in London at 4 o'clock in the morning. We were all watching world history in two worlds.

Found Things to Do
Even Though Disabled

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Mrs. C. A. F. there are many small tasks a person confined to a wheelchair can do and so feel useful. My brother was so confined for many years. When he could move the chair about and use his hands, he would take the clean ashtrays from the kitchen counter and put them where they belonged. He also had a tray to hold the silverware so he could separate it and put it away in proper spaces in the drawer. He took old newspapers, folded several sheets together and stacked them neatly in a basket to have ready to start a fire in the fireplace. Mrs. C. A. F. could pass lots of time knitting and crocheting small articles, such as gloves, scarves and bed socks.—MRS. K. F.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Do you know of any way to remove stains left by soft drinks being spilled on an antique piano? When I try to wash them off, the top coat of antiquing comes off, too. The underneath coat is yellow gold and the top coat is brown.—KATE

DEAR KATE—Your letter sounds as if there was no protective finish coat put on top the antiquing, when your piano was refinished. I am afraid if water removes the antiquing, anything else will do the same.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—I find a long hat pin is an invaluable sewing aid. With care, this pin can be used to pull out the final tip of collars with the new, long, tapered look; it can serve as a tiny finger in working with fabric under the needle and reach where fingers cannot. Also, I use a large, magnetized clip to hold pattern instructions at eye level, fastening the sheet on a lamp or metal picture frame so my hands are free as I work.—MRS. M. A.

Chiefs Vault Into Super Bowl

Feels That Team Better Than 1966 'Super' Entry

OAKLAND (AP) — The way Coach Hank Stram feels about it, the Minnesota Vikings will meet in Sunday's Super Bowl game may very well be the Green Bay Packers in disguise.

Stram's memories of the Packers are colored by the passage of time and the reflections on the Green Bay team that whipped his Chiefs 35-10 three years ago in the first Super Bowl game. But Stram does remember, and he does find resemblances in the Vikings.

"In a lot of respects they are very much alike," Stram said after his Chiefs had gained entry to pro football's premier event with a 17-7 victory over Oakland. "Both teams have simplicity in approach and executed very well."

"They don't do a lot of things — but what they do, they do well."

As for his own Chiefs, Stram said frankly:

"I don't think there's any comparisons. Our team is much better than the 1966 team. We're much better defensively."

That improvement is reflected in the fact that only four defensive starters remain from those Super Bowl losers and it was reflected on the floor of Oakland Coliseum Sunday as the Chiefs' defense played the key role in bringing Kansas City the American Football League championship.

They put on a furiously fierce pass rush on Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica that forced him out of the game at one point with jammed fingers on his throwing hand and dumped him four times for losses and so harassed him that he had three passes intercepted.

And, after the Chiefs had sputtered to a 17-7 lead, the defensive unit four times stopped the Raiders inside the Kansas City 40 in the fourth quarter when any successful offensive thrust by Lamonica might have changed the momentum of the game and the result of the game.

"Our great desire — our will to win — was expressed by our defensive line," said Stram.

"We were a very tight offensive club at the beginning. The defense kept us in the game."

They did for the first 27 minutes, limiting Oakland to a 7-0 lead on Charley Smith's three-yard run following a 24-yard pass to Warren Wells, the fleet Raider receiver who played despite a shoulder separation suffered three weeks ago.

Then the Chiefs broke the first of two important offensive plays Stram singled out as the keys to the victory.

With the ball on the Oakland 42, quarterback Len Dawson sent Frank Pitts straight down the sidelines for a 41-yard pass that defender Nemiah Wilson couldn't break up. Wendell Hayes smashed the final yard on the next play and Jan Stenerud's conversion made it 7-7.

"The play to Pitts provided us with a great lift," said Stram, "and we were in dire need of it. We were tight offensively but I felt if we could get untracked we could relieve the pressure."

The pressure was there again, however, midway of the third quarter when Dawson went back to pass with a third-and-14 situation on his own two yard line and was chased into the end zone by the Oakland defense, arching a pass down the sidelines to Otis Taylor just before he was reached.

Taylor caught it — and he caught it in bounds, making a brilliant over the head grab for 35 yards that took the Chiefs out of trouble and started a drive that didn't end until the goal line had been crossed by Holmes on a five-yard run.

Stenerud later added a field goal, but it was out of reach at that point as it turned out, although there are those who point to the series before when Lamonica was subjected to a brutal pass rush by defensive end Aaron Brown that resulted in his jamming three fingers on his throwing hand.

George Blanda came in to replace him and had a pass intercepted by Emmitt Thomas in the end zone that cut off the drive. Dawson then hitched up the Chief offense, connected on a key pass to Taylor and put the Chiefs ahead to stay.

Lamonica sat out one more series before returning, but was unable to get the Raiders a score.

"The last thing we do would be to make excuses," said Oakland Coach John Madden. "We win or lose as a team. I'm sure Daryle's hand bothered him. It was hurt. But it's no excuse. The thing that led to our downfall was breaks."

"We didn't take advantage of them. They did, and they should be complimented."

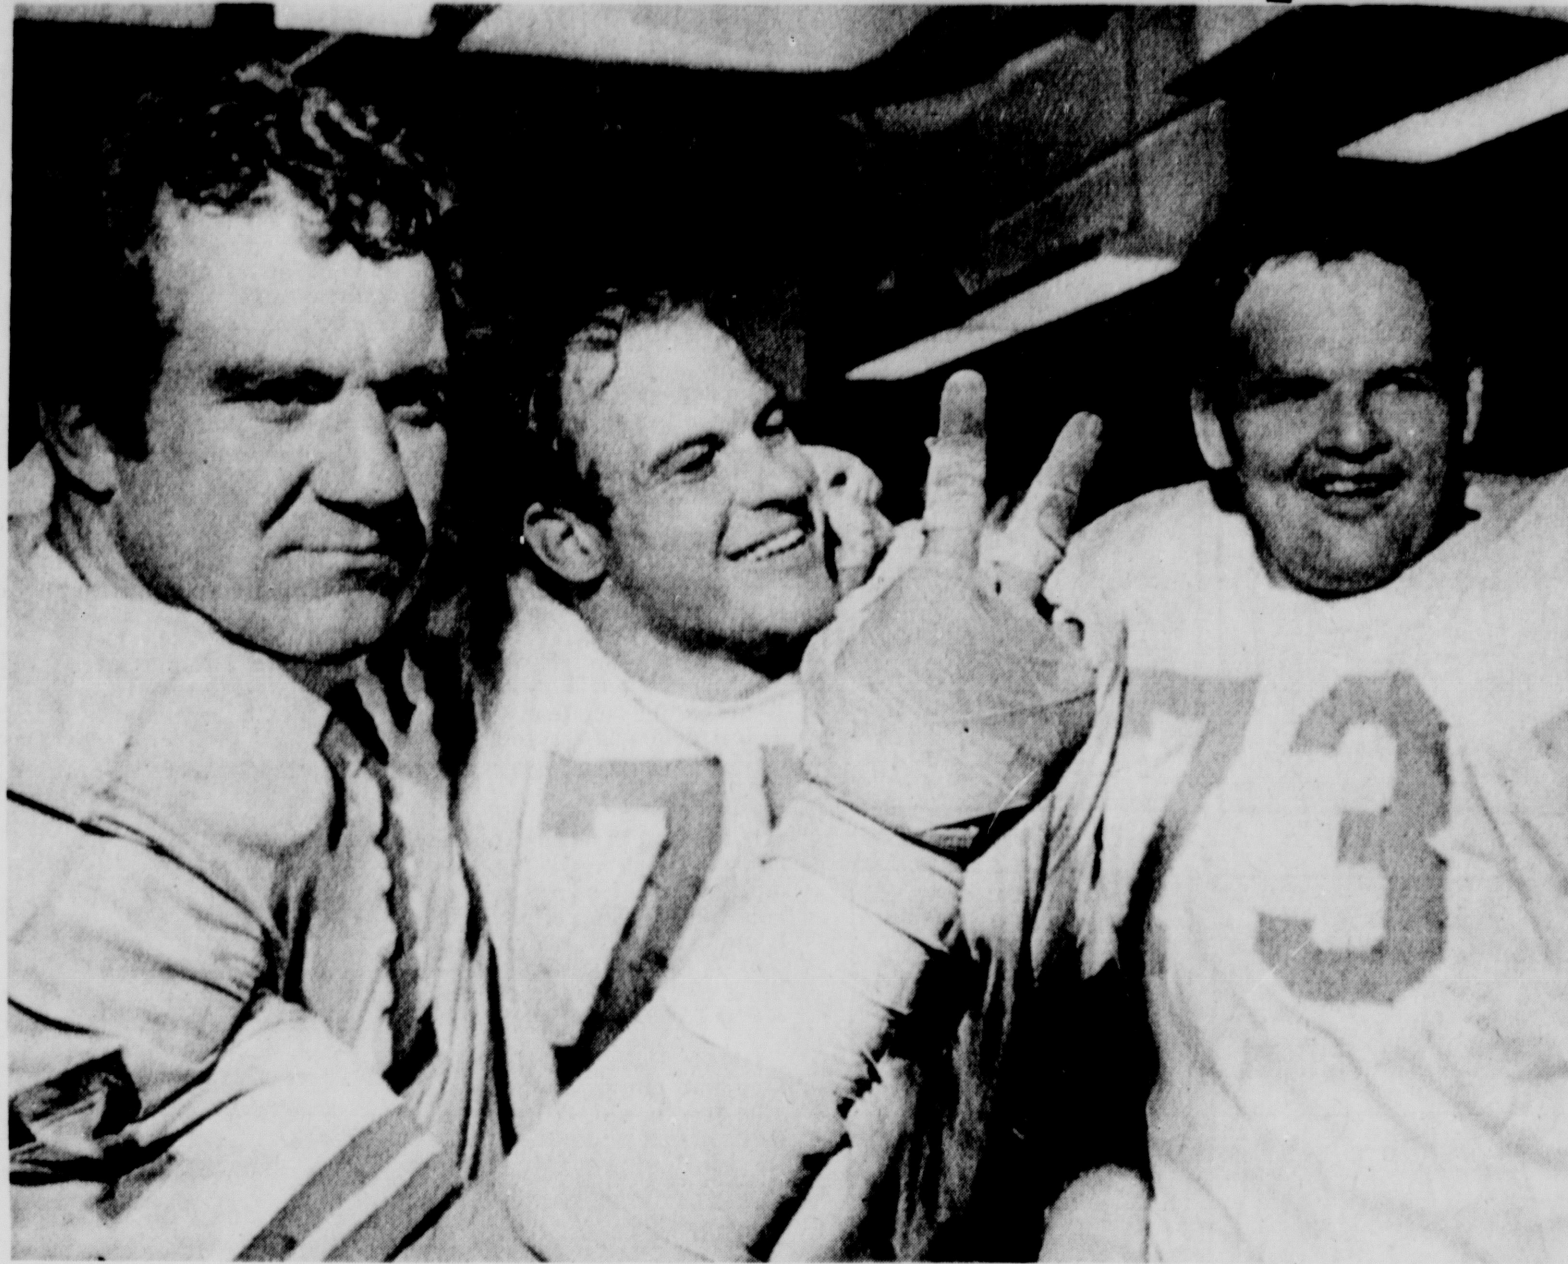

It was, of course, hard to blame the defeat on anything but the Kansas City defense, which made a slight adjustment that may have made the difference. The ends, Brown and Jerry Mays, decided to change their movements after noting their lack of success in two previous losses this season.

"Aaron and myself took more inside pass rushes than we've ever taken before," said Mays. "We asked for permission to do that and the coaches conferred and approved. We felt Lamonica didn't mind outside pressure but was bothered by inside pressure."

Missouri, Kansas Game Highlights Early Season

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big Eight Conference basketball teams, who rolled up a plush 52-13 record against outsiders before flexing their muscles at one another in last week's annual preseason tournament, start playing for money instead of matches this week.

The 1970 conference cage race begins tonight when Kansas travels to Missouri and Oklahoma State goes to Kansas State.

Nebraska and Iowa State meet Tuesday night at Ames, Iowa, and Oklahoma joins the battle Saturday night at Kansas State.

Defending champion Colorado cools its heels until Jan. 17, when the Buffaloes go to Nebraska.

Colorado remains the favorite to repeat as champion, although the Buffaloes lost 73-72 to Oklahoma in the championship game of the league tournament which concluded last Tuesday.

Oklahoma looks for real, and is clearly the most improved team in the Big Eight. However the Sooners rely heavily on four sophomores, and even Coach John MacLeod admits they continue to make more mistakes than a solid title contender should.

Colorado misses 7-foot center Ron Smith—who transferred to Wichita State—for the help he would give the Buffs on the backboards. Colorado appeared to count on star forward Cliff Meely a little too much in the tournament, but guards Gordon Tope and Dudley Mitchell should relieve some of the pressure on Meely, and sophomore Jim Creighton should continue to improve.

The scramble for the title could be the most mixed-up in Big Eight history. Colorado won with a 10-4 record last March, and most coaches say they will settle for that again this year.

Kansas, 7-3, and fourth in the tournament, still is in a shake-down stage, with sophomores Aubrey Nash, Bob Kivisto and Bud Stallworth talented, but still sophomores.

Missouri, 6-4, has one of the Big Eight's most veteran teams yet the Tigers are short on rebounding strength. Sophomore Henry Smith, a 6-foot-6 junior college transfer, is the big hope for the Tigers to achieve their potential.

Oklahoma State's Cowboys breezed to a 9-0 non-conference record, then lost all three of their games in the tournament. "We're still on the bottom trying to climb up," sighed veteran coach Henry P. Iba, who has the least talent and least height in years.

Kansas State, 8-3, has two of the Big Eight's better sophomores in Bob Zender and David Hall, but the Wildcats have played erratically and coach Cotton Fitzsimmons wants more consistency. If Zender and Hall can rebound as well as they score, K-State should be a threat.

Kansas' Dave Robisch takes the best scoring average into league play, boasting a 26.6 mark in 10 games. Bill Cain of Iowa State is next at 20.9, Garfield Heard of Oklahoma third at 20.8 and Meely fourth at 20.6. Cain also is the top rebounder with a 15.1 average. Heard is next at 12.9 and Robisch third at 12.3.

Stram Says the Vikings A Lot Like Green Bay

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings look more like the Green Bay Packers who beat Kansas City in the first Super Bowl game three years ago than anybody else the Chiefs play, Coach Hank Stram said Sunday night.

"Minnesota has a very solid, fundamental football team," Stram said as the Chiefs arrived back in Kansas City for a 13-hour stay before taking off for New Orleans. They meet the Vikings Sunday in the fourth Super Bowl game at Tulane Stadium.

"The Vikings are very strong physically, and very fundamental," Stram added. "They're more like the Green Bay team we played in 1967 than most teams we play. They don't use a lot of basic formations, and execution is the main thing with them."

"We have a great deal of respect for them. We know they are a very good football team."

Chiefs quarterback Len Dawson said the Vikings present new problems for Kansas City because "nobody in our league actually approximates the Vikings." Dawson agreed with Stram that, "The closest thing (to the Vikings) was the Packers team in the 1967 Super Bowl, and I think they're stronger than that Green Bay team."

The Chiefs have faced the Vikings only once, beating them 13-10 on a last-minute field goal by Jan Stenerud in an exhibition game in August of 1968 in Bloomington, Minn.

"It's hard to compare them between then and now," Stram said, "because they hadn't settled on their No. 1 quarterback between Joe Kapp and Gary Cuozzo, and we had made eight positional changes that summer."

Stram left no doubt of the importance he placed on the Chiefs' victory over Oakland, after losing twice to the Raiders during the regular season.

"Definitely, this was our biggest victory," he said. "It was the most important because of the circumstances involved in the series with Oakland."

"It was important for a young team that won as many games as we did last year and then again this year to be rewarded with a championship. You can only come close so often, then it can have a very adverse effect on a team. I think this got us over another very important hurdle."

The Chiefs were scheduled to board their chartered jet for New Orleans at 1 p.m. today. Their first workout in City Park Stadium there will be Tuesday.

Only major injury from the Oakland game was to free safety Johnny Robinson. He was to be X-rayed early today for possible cracked ribs. Robinson was replaced late in the Oakland game by Willie Mitchell, normally a cornerback.

Kaycee Fans Jam Airport Upon Arrival

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Several thousand Kansas City Chiefs fans jammed things up at Municipal Airport Sunday night, welcoming the new American Football League champions home from their victory at Oakland.

Police Maj. Buren Thomas estimated the crowd at 5,000. Other estimates ranged up to 10,000.

An airport spokesman said fans began arriving at the airport at 7 p.m. barely an hour after the game ended in Oakland.

Temperatures were in the mid-30s during the evening, dropping to near freezing shortly before the plane's arrival at 11:30 p.m.

The throng was restrained in a roped-in area until the plane landed, then broke police ranks and swarmed around the big craft, chanting, waving banners and trying to get glimpses of the players.

Signs said, "Let's vanish the Vikings," "De-Kappitate Kapp," "Scalp Kapp, Super Chiefs," and "Aaron Brown, Secretary of Defense."

They referred to the Minnesota Vikings, National Football League champions who will be the Chiefs' opponent in the Super Bowl in New Orleans next Sunday. Joe Kapp is the Vikings' quarterback, and Aaron Brown is the Chiefs' defensive end who shone in the Kansas City victory.

Chiefs' Homes Are Burglarized While Away

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Four members of the Kansas City Chiefs American Football League champions squad found their homecoming slightly tarnished early today.

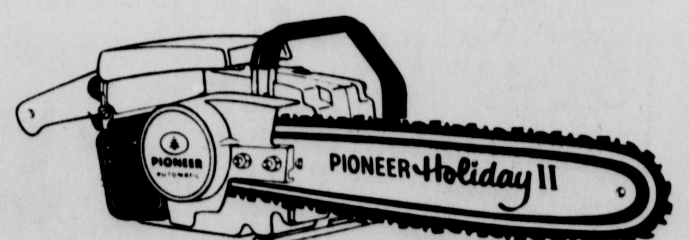

Police said apartments occupied by Gloster Richardson, Willie Mitchell, Ed Podolak and Bob Stein had been burglarized. The loss was not estimated but officers said it included cameras, television sets, clothes, photographs and other items.

Richardson and Mitchell room together and Podolak and Stein share an apartment in a huge complex on the city's west side (4400 Jarboe).

The burglary was not discovered until the four returned home early today from Oakland where the Chiefs defeated the Raiders 17-7 for the AFL title and a Super Bowl berth against Minnesota.

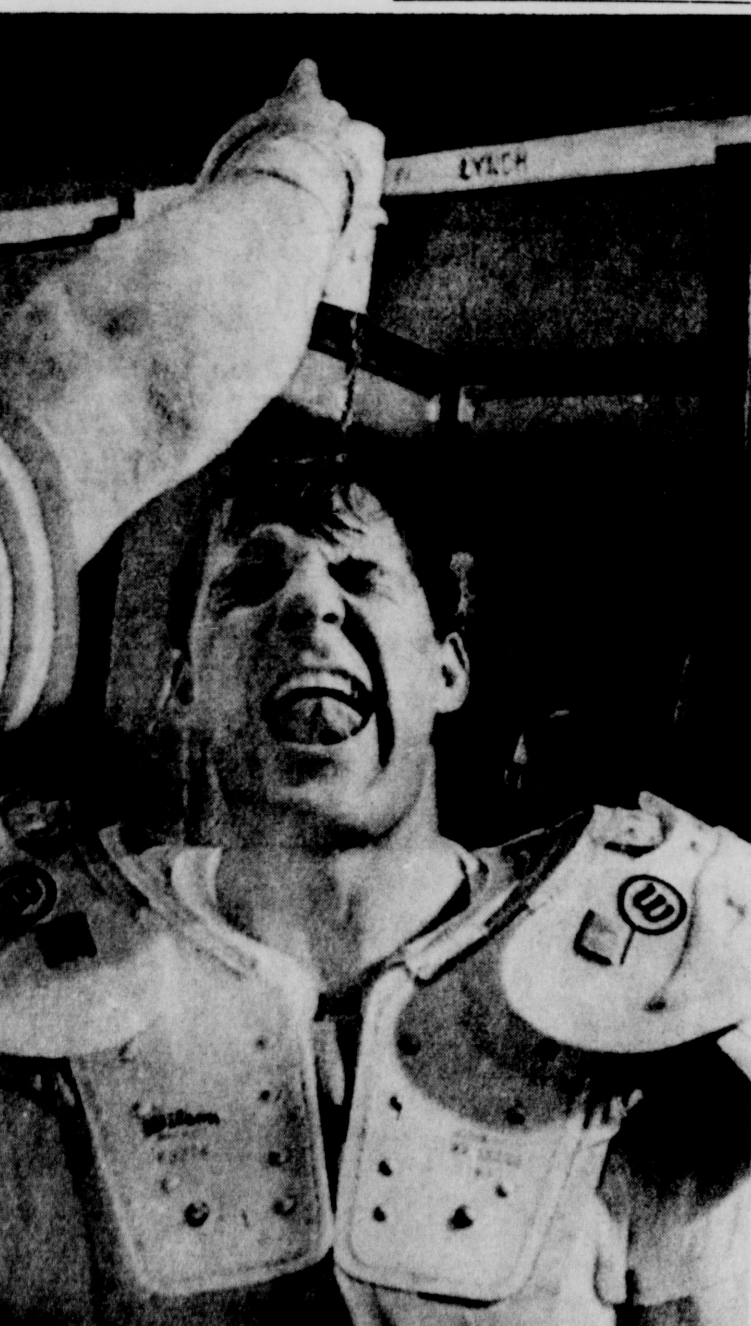

The team is scheduled to leave for New Orleans at 1 p.m. today to begin preparations for the battle with the National Football League champion on Sunday.

Vikings Roll Past Cleveland; To Meet Chiefs for Crown

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Joe Kapp set the tone for the Minnesota Vikings' approach to next Sunday's Super Bowl game after beating the Cleveland Browns 27-7 Sunday for their first National Football League title.

"We've done it before," said the Vikings' blood-spattered quarterback. "Now we just have to do it one more time."

Kapp, of course, referred to the Vikings' uphill battle to the league championship as a ninth-year expansion team by whipping Los Angeles for the conference crown and then manhandling Cleveland before 47,900 frozen fans in eight-degree chill at Metropolitan Stadium.

Bud Grant, the steel-eyed coach of the Vikings, took the usual cautious coach's outlook on next Sunday's Super Bowl game with Kansas City, the American Football League champs, in New Orleans.

"I thought the best team won," said Grant after watching the final stages of Kansas City's 17-7 victory over Oakland on television. "They impressed us with their aggressiveness and control of the game, at least the part we saw."

The Vikings and Chiefs have met only once, in a 1968 pre-season game won by Kansas City 13-10.

"They were immense," said Grant. "We have heard people say that Minnesota and Kansas City are both physical teams. Maybe so, but not quite in the same sense. They are a much bigger team than we are. We don't have people to match the size of Buck Buchanan, Aaron Brown and Jerry Mays. Their offensive line is just as big. The physical matchup isn't the same in the sense that they're so darned big."

The Vikings scheduled a squad meeting today and plan to fly to New Orleans early Tuesday morning. Then they will really begin to start getting ready for the Chiefs.

"We didn't scout them," said Grant. "We will have to depend on the game films we exchange."

The Vikings are lucky they still have a football team in one piece after the exuberant celebration by the fans in the final seconds of Sunday's game. Kapp was pummeled by well-wishers on his way to the locker room.

"It was even worse than the Cleveland rush," said Kapp who scrambled seven yards for the first touchdown on a broken play, after fullback Bill Brown bumped into him.

"That was supposed to be an off tackle shot by Brown," explained Kapp. "But Bill slipped on the ice and we ran together so I just tried to follow the blocking on in."

Two passes by Kapp to Gene Washington on which Cleveland defensive men slipped and fell helped open up a 14-0 lead in the first quarter and made the Browns try to play catch-up football.

Erich Barnes slipped and fell while trying to cover Washington who took the ball all alone on the 40 and raced in to complete a 75-yard play for the second touchdown.

The Vikings scored again on a 30-yard field goal by Fred Cox and a 20-yard run by Dave Osborn for a 24-0 halftime lead. Another field goal by Cox from the 32 in the third ended the Minnesota scoring. Cleveland finally got on the board in the final period on a three-yard pass from Bill Nelsen to Gary Collins but the Vikings were at the two when the game ended with fans lining the field.

"The referee (Tommy Bell) told me we could try for the score and run out the clock," said Kapp. "I told him we were going for the score but we never got the play off."

Nelsen, the passing star of last week's 33-14 romp over Dallas, suffered a numbness in his right arm after he was hit by defensive end Jim Marshall in the first quarter. He completed 17 of 33 for 181 yards but was intercepted twice, by Wally Hilgenberg and Paul Krause and was dumped by Roy Winston and Alan Page.

The Vikings' Purple Gang, the front four, got Nelsen just twice but put the pressure on him all day. Hilgenberg, the right linebacker, was the defensive star with the first interception of his six-year pro career and a recovery of Leroy Kelly's fumble.

The victory in a winter wonderland setting with snow piled into 20-foot heaps around the fringe of the stadium and a heated plastic bubble and flame-throwers thawing out the playing surface was worth about $8,000 to each Viking. Each Brown will get about $5,000.

Weather is No Barrier

Two members of the local SCUBA club, the Sedalia Divers, Inc., Melvin Poundstone (left) and Donnie Kabler, were the first two divers to test the water Sunday in the old Menefee Quarry, northwest of Sedalia. True, the ice was more than four inches thick, but this proved to be no barrier to the underwater enthusiasts. In Tuesday's Democrat and Wednesday's Capital, we will present a full picture layout of some of Sunday's activities of the group. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

Price is High for Hosting Super Bowl

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The cast of characters has been selected for Sunday's Super Bowl game, the first to be played in New Orleans, which will apparently have pro football's championship clash for at least two more years.

A highly knowledgeable source told The Associated Press that the office of pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle has a three-year option on 82,000-capacity Tulane Stadium, where Minnesota and Kansas City battle on Sunday in the fourth and final championship game between the National and American Football Leagues.

This information had not been previously made public. "They must have a stadium that can bring in a big gate in order to meet the payoffs," said the source. "It's either here, Cleveland, or raise the ticket prices again. It's too cold in Cleveland, even though that stadium can handle 84,000 and Rozelle doesn't want to raise the prices again."

The Super Bowl was first played in Los Angeles, then shifted to Miami's Orange Bowl for the past two years. A task force wooed the club owners early last year and the game was awarded to New Orleans. The official announcement from Rozelle said the site selection would be made for only one year at a time.

Miamians have been confident the game would return to the Florida city for 1971, when the first championship under the NFL-AFL merger format would pit the American Conference and National Conference titlists.

Last year's Super Bowl, which saw Joe Namath lead the New York Jets to a stunning 16-7 conquest of Baltimore for the AFL's first victory in three championship clashes, had a paid crowd of 75,389.

The $1.2 million gate will be the largest ever in pro football. It will take practically all of it —and perhaps even some of the $2 million in broadcasting rights —just to pay the competing players, $15,000 to each winning player, $7,500 to the losers.

Coach Dick Gagliardi is in his fifth season with Yale's hockey team.

Collier's Words Proved Right

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cleveland Coach Blanton Collier found himself an unwilling prophet without joy in the frozen northlands while the Minnesota Vikings toasted their first National Football League championship.

"I'd like to have proven myself wrong," said Collier, after the Vikings had overpowered his Browns 27-7 Sunday in the NFL title game. "I'm on record prior to this season that Minnesota just possibly had the best football team in the NFL."

The 63-year-old elder statesman of NFL coaches added: "I hate to be a prophet. We were beaten by a great football team. We don't have any excuses. I hope they go all the way."

"All the way" was also the thought of quarterback Joe Kapp and the rest of his Viking teammates.

"We've done it before and we just have to do it one more time," said Kapp of Sunday's Super Bowl clash with the American Football League champion Kansas City Chiefs.

Bud Grant, in his third season as Vikings head coach, felt that "we still have the biggest one of all left."

Grant watched part of the AFL game on television and said he thought "the best team won. The Chiefs impressed us with their aggressiveness and control of the game, at least that part of it we saw."

"They were immense. They have excellent personnel and we know they'll be tough."

Collier refused to compare the Vikings with the 1968 NFL champion Baltimore Colts who defeated the Browns 34-0 in the title game. But he said the Vikings were "one of the real good ones to come out of the NFL. Their offensive team is vastly underrated and they have the best front four in football."

World Hockey Games Switched to Sweden

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) —The World Ice Hockey Championships scheduled for March in Canada will not be held there.

The Canadian Amateur Ice Hockey Federation canceled the championship Sunday after the European hockey federations refused to play against a Canadian team containing professional players.

After Canada's action, the meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation decided to transfer the 1970 championships to Sweden. Sweden had been selected as a standby at the time the events were awarded to Canada.

Texas Wishbone is Half Gone for 1970 Season

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas' wishbone will be broken in half next year.

The loss of quarterback James Street, the fourth down magician, and halfback Ted Koy, a top pro prospect, will make it especially tough for Royal's Longhorns to repeat as the national champions of college football.

"You are always hopeful of a repeat," said Royal, "but the odds are so heavily against that kind of thing. It's a frustrating feeling when you know it's only one way to go. I don't want to sound like a defeatist, but you've got to be a realist."

Royal, coach at Texas since 1957, directed the school's first national champion in 1963 and missed out the next year when the Longhorns gambled on a two-point conversion and lost to Arkansas, 14-13, for Texas' only defeat.

This season Royal gambled—not once, not twice but three times—in the final do-or-die games against Arkansas and Notre Dame and it paid off each time, giving the Longhorns the national title.

The Associated Press' final poll of sportswriters and sportscasters, after the Jan. 1 bowl games, made Texas the No. 1 team in the nation with 37 first place votes and a total of 910 points.

Penn State was No. 2 with seven first place votes and 822 points. Two voters split their top choice between Texas and Penn State, and two others selected Ohio State, No. 1 all year until upset by Michigan in its final game.

Southern Cal finished third; Ohio State was fourth. Notre Dame climbed from ninth to fifth after losing to Texas, 21-17, in the final 68 seconds in the Cotton Bowl; Missouri remained sixth despite its 10-3 loss to Penn State in the Orange Bowl; Arkansas fell from third to seventh after Mississippi whipped the Razorbacks 27-22 in the Sugar Bowl; Mississippi leaped from 13th to eighth; Michigan dropped from seventh to ninth after losing to Southern Cal 10-3 in the Rose Bowl; and Louisiana State, which did not play in a bowl, was shifted from eighth to No. 10.

The second 10, in order, were Nebraska, Houston, UCLA, Florida, Tennessee, Colorado, West Virginia, Purdue, Stanford and Auburn.

Texas' backfield of Street, Koy, Steve Worster and Jim Bertelsen—operating out of Texas' two-year-old wishbone-T offense—was considered the finest in the Southwest Conference's 75-year history, ripping off 2,242 yards in 10 games out of a team total of 3,630 yards rushing, an SWC record.

There are those who believe that Texas would have been No. 1 last season too, if Street had started instead of Bill Bradley, a marvelous athlete who is now a punter-defensive back for the Philadelphia Eagles but was miscast as a quarterback in the intricate wishbone-T. The Longhorns tied Houston and lost to Texas Tech, and then Royal replaced Bradley with Street, and the peppery 175-pounder directed Texas to 20 straight victories.

Koy called Street a "mini-psychologist," a quarterback who talks as good a game in the huddle as he plays.

His replacement will be either Eddie Phillips, who averaged 6.4 yards a carry running this season as Street's understudy but seemed to lack his nimble footwork, or freshman Gary Keithley, a 6-2 strongman who can zig a football but also lacks Street's agility.

Texas will lose its 252-pound All-America tackle Bob McKay; linebacker Glen Halsell, who also made at least one All-America team; and the Campbell twins, Mike and Tom, who always seemed to be in the right place on defense at the right time.

Safety Freddie Steinmark's career was ended when cancer forced the amputation of one leg at the hip.

What's a four-letter word meaning success? Easy, UCLA.

Bessie Allen Dies Sunday At Age of 82

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Mrs. Bessie Evalina Allen, 82, wife of Dr. Forrest C. "Phog" Allen, died of a heart attack in a hospital Sunday.

During her husband's 39 years in the University of Kansas Athletic Department, Mrs. Allen tutored athletes and was regarded by many as their second mother.

A native of Wellington, Mo., Mrs. Allen moved to Lawrence from Warrensburg, Mo., when Dr. Allen became athletic director and basketball coach at KU in 1919. He retired as coach in 1956.

Mrs. Allen helped her husband write several books and was an accomplished literary editor. She was active in church work.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons, Milton, of Lawrence, and Dr. Robert, of Mission Hills, Kan.; two daughters, Mrs. Jane Mons, Lake Forest, Ill., and Mrs. Eleanor Glenn, Culver, Ind.; 14 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Rumsey Chapel.

year-winning college basketball games with scientific ease.

On Saturday night, the Bruins continued on their merry, undefeated way by smearing 13th-ranked Notre Dame 108-77 at friendly Pauley Pavilion.

Coach Johnny Dee of Notre Dame was impressed after the Bruins taught his squad a lesson.

"UCLA has more professional prospects than the other two teams together—top-ranked Kentucky and third-ranked South (Carolina)," said Dee, whose club played all three in eight days.

The victory gave the second-ranked Bruins their 100th success in the last 102 games. P.S. —Coach John Wooden's teams have lost only once on their home court in nine years, last year to Southern Cal.

Elsewhere in the Top Ten Saturday night, Kentucky shot down Mississippi 95-73; fourth-ranked North Carolina whipped Rice 98-72; fifth-ranked Ohio University belabored Kent State 78-52; Tennessee, No. 6, clipped Mississippi State 58-56; Houston, No. 8, defeated Hawaii 116-84 and ninth-ranked Washington bounced Yale 84-70.

Notre Dame, which lost by two points to Kentucky and by one in overtime to South Carolina, never was in Saturday's game with UCLA. Wooden attributed the impressive victory to "a good, well-balanced team effort."

The obvious question: Can UCLA beat Kentucky?

"I have no idea if we can beat Kentucky," said Wooden. "I haven't seen Kentucky. But we're a good enough team that on a given night we could take anyone. I won't say we're the best, but we rank up there with the best and Kentucky ranks up there, too."

UCLA opens defense of its Pacific-8 Conference title Friday night at home against Oregon.

Upstart, Mississippi had Kentucky by seven points at the end of the first half, but then the Wildcats let loose some deadly artillery in the person of Dan Issel.

Issel, Kentucky's 6-foot-8 jumping jack whom Coach Adolph Rupp calls the best college center in America, scored 31 points.

Charlie Scott scored 24 points to lead North Carolina over Rice. The winners sprinted to a 50-31 halftime lead and coasted the rest of the way.

Craig Love scored 20 points and had 15 rebounds to pace Ohio, Jim England ignited a late rally to spur Tennessee's victory, Ollie Taylor pocketed 32 points for Houston and George Irvine had 22 in Washington's success.

Last Place Rockets Act Like Leaders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Denver Rockets are a last place team but they're not playing like one.

The Rockets pounded Dallas 122-85 Sunday night for their seventh straight victory in the American Basketball Association and their ninth in 11 games under their new coach, Joe Belmont.

The victory, sparked by Larry Jones' 28 points and Spencer Haywood's 25, matched the Rockets' longest winning streak ever and their 37-point winning margin was the largest ever amassed by a Rocket team.

Because of their miserable start this season, the Rockets are still in last place in the Western Division. But the way they're playing it looks like their days in the cellar are numbered. They're only one game out of fourth place in the tight five-team division.

In other games Sunday, Indiana beat Carolina 121-113 and Miami whipped the New York Nets 124-104.

In Saturday ABA games, Kentucky best New Orleans 119-107, Dallas edged Los Angeles 139-137, Carolina defeated New York 100-91, and Miami turned back Pittsburgh 114-111.

Denver surged to a 25-14 lead over Dallas in the first quarter and was never headed. But the Rockets provided some excitement in the final five minutes by pumping in five three-point goals, three of them by Jeff Congdon.

The loss dropped Dallas into a tie for second in the Western Division with Washington, five games back to New Orleans.

Indiana increased their lead in the Eastern Division to six games over idle Kentucky by beating Carolina. The Packers led throughout and held a 23-point margin in the final quarter.

Miami took an early six-point lead and rolled on to beat New York.

Philadelpia got hot with Boston leading 75-63 with 9:39 left in the third quarter. Hal Greer, Bill Cunningham and Darrall Imhoff sparked the 76ers in the final quarter while Boston went cold and scored only one field goal in the final 3:47. Cunningham led all scorers with 37 points.

San Diego led 97-90 after three periods and then exploded with 43 points in the final frame to beat Chicago in a romp. Elvin Hayes paced the Rockets with 34 points.

Seattle led Detroit 81-80 going into the final period, when the seasaw game between the divisional cellar dwellers turned in Detroit's favor. The Pistons came alive, with Dave Bing and Jimmy Walker leading the way, and led by as many as 11 points in the last quarter. Walker was the game's high scorer with 29 points.

Harrison Improving

OMAHA (AP)—Russell Harrison, Kansas State University fullback, is listed as in fair and improving condition in a hospital.

Harrison, of Omaha, and Miss Sandra Jean Anderson were found unconscious from exhaust fumes in a car Friday. They apparently had been overcome 12 hours earlier.

Miss Anderson has been released from the hospital.

Leafs Tie It Late

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
The net was empty but the Pittsburgh Penguins did better when Toronto had a goaltender in front of it.

The Maple Leafs yanked goalie Bruce Gamble for an extra attacker in the final minute Sunday night and the maneuver paid off when Brit Selby scored with 25 seconds left to play, giving Toronto a 4-4 National Hockey League tie with Pittsburgh.

In other NHL games Sunday, Detroit shut out Chicago 4-0, New York ripped Oakland 5-2 and Philadelphia dropped Minnesota 3-1.

In Saturday's games, Boston battered Los Angeles 6-2, Montreal took Oakland 5-1, Detroit tripped Philadelphia 6-1, Toronto defeated Chicago 6-2, St. Louis shut out Pittsburgh 6-0 and New York and Minnesota played to a 3-3 tie.

Defenseman Bob Woytowich, returning to the Pittsburgh line-up after missing nine games, scored twice in the first period and the Penguins maintained a two-goal lead through most of the game.

Then, with eight minutes left, Murray Oliver hit for the Leafs, narrowing the Pittsburgh lead to 4-3. It stayed that way until Gamble left and Selby stuffed the tying goal past Al Smith.

Gary Unger scored his sixth and seventh goals the last four games and goalie Roy Edwards kicked out 33 Chicago shots as Detroit picked up its first shut-out of the season.

The victory gave the Red Wings an eight-point bulge over the Black Hawks, who now lead last place Toronto by just one point in the NHL's East Division.

MIAA, MCAU Members Turn to League Games

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
With holiday tournaments and the bulk of non-conference action behind them, most Missouri collegiate basketball teams get down to the serious business of conference races this week.

Both the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association and the Missouri Collegiate Athletic Union crank into high gear with league action by the end of the week.

Southwest Missouri State moved to the head of the MIAA class with a 77-57 victory over Northwest Missouri Saturday night. That gave Southwest a 3-0 conference record and dropped Northwest to 0-2.

Northeast Missouri, 1-0, plays at Central Missouri, 2-0, Thursday night in another big test, then Saturday night Central is at Northwest. Northeast at Southwest and Southeast Missouri, 0-2, at Missouri-Rolla, also 0-2, in a full schedule.

In non-league contests to-night, Southwest Missouri hosts Arkansas State, Rolla is home against Texas-Arlington and Evangel entertains Northeastern Oklahoma.

MCAU teams also get back into the swing of things this week, with four league games on tap Friday night. Drury, 2-0, plays at Graceland, 1-1; Culver-Stocketon, 2-0, at Missouri Valley, 0-1; Central Methodist, 0-2, at Tarkio, 1-0, and Westminster, 0-2, at William Jewell, 1-1.

William Jewell lost 101-93 to Rockhurst Saturday, while Tarkio bowed 68-49 to Doane, Neb., in the championship game of the Doane invitational tournament. Missouri-Kansas City bombed Concordia, Neb., 120-83, in the third-place game at Doane.

Israelis Claim Attacks Create Two Casualties

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel claimed two kills and Egypt one after their first air battle in more than a month of almost daily Israeli strikes.

The Israeli military command said two of Egypt's MIG21s exploded in the air and a third was hit during the battle Sunday over Egyptian territory near the Suez Canal.

A spokesman in Cairo said one Israeli jet was shot down in the dogfight and that an Egyptian pilot took an aerial photograph of it exploding. Israel said all its planes returned safely.

Israeli spokesmen said Egyptian jets intercepted the Israeli raiders about 20 miles west of the canal while the Israelis were on a bombing mission against military targets.

Panthers' Inquest To Open Soon

CHICAGO (AP) — A coroner's inquest into the fatal shooting of two Black Panthers in a police raid will open Tuesday.

The police, from the state's attorney's office, say the Panthers fired first when officers went with warrants to an apartment to search for illegal firearms. Eighteen weapons were seized, police reported.

The Panthers' lawyers said the police fired first and without provocation.

The case is the subject of a current investigation by the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Fred Hampton, 21, chairman of the Illinois Black Panther party, and Mark Clark, 22, a party leader from Peoria, were killed in the raid Dec. 4.

Coroner Andrew J. Toman, a physician, has appointed a lawyer, Martin Gerber, 62, to preside over the inquest.

Such a move was called for by the Chicago Bar Association, Black Panther party lawyers and others.

Gerber presided over a coroner's inquest in 1961 that investigated a controversial case in which a policeman ultimately was sentenced to prison in the fatal shooting of two youths.

Gerber said he was willing to allow one television crew to film the proceedings, with the local stations each receiving access to the footage.

Coroner Toman said he would consider the idea.

Gerber said the inquest probably would last three days to a week, depending on the number of witnesses.

The coroner's jury does not rule on guilt or innocence but fixes medical cause of death and establishes whether a criminal act was committed.

The state's attorney's office has said the 14 police raiders would testify at the inquest.

Attorneys for seven Panthers allegedly in the apartment at the time of the shootings say their clients may not testify because of possible self-incrimination. They are charged with attempted murder and other crimes.

Gerber will serve without fee as special deputy coroner.

The strike lasted 1½ hours, the spokesmen said, and the Egyptian planes "did not interfere again" after the dogfight.

Israel now claims to have destroyed 62 Egyptian warplanes since the 1967 Middle East war. The Israeli military command also announced that four Arab saboteurs were killed and six Israeli soldiers wounded in a clash near a refugee camp in the Gaza Strip today. No details were given.

Israel meanwhile released three of the Lebanese civilians kidnapped by Israeli commandos Friday, and sources in Tel Aviv said they might be taking home an offer for a new prisoner swap. The Israelis captured nine other civilians and 10 soldiers in the raid on a Lebanese border village. Israel said the raid was retaliation for the abduction of an Israeli watchman from a border outpost earlier in the week.

Hassanein Heikal, editor of the Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram and a confidant of President Nasser, reported that Algerian President Houari Boumedienne decided during last month's Arab summit meeting that Algeria would fight alongside Egypt in the event of renewed war with Israel.

Heikal also said Morocco agreed to furnish an unspecified amount of armaments to Egypt, and Saudi Arabia, Libya and Kuwait agreed to foot the bill for a $60 million weapons contract signed by Egypt with an unidentified foreign power.

Egyptian officials had no comment on reports that Nasser had approached France about arms purchases. Al-Ahram said a London newspaper reported that Egypt had asked France for $200 to $300 million worth of weapons was a "fairy tale."

The Israeli Cabinet Sunday assailed the French embargo on arms sales to Israel, and called France's expulsion of Israel's chief arms purchaser "unjustified."

Police Arrest Two Bogus Bill Passers

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—Two men sought by Kansas City police in connection with the passing of a counterfeit $100 bill last month have been arrested in Colorado Springs.

Authorities say they are holding Paul Wheeler, 30, and Felix Matthews, 33, both of Vidalia, Ga.

Police say the two were arrested after they tried to buy a transistor radio with a fake $100 bill. Officers said the men had 236 counterfeit bills with them when they were arrested.

Kansas City Police issued a pickup order on Wheeler, Matthews and the car they were driving December 13th after they arrested Ashley Gaddy, 33, who they said tried to get a clerk to change a bogus $100 bill.

Two men, believed to have been Wheeler and Matthews, were outside the store where Gaddy was arrested and eluded police.

Kansas City authorities say they will wait to see if Colorado authorities prosecute Wheeler and Matthews before initiating extradition proceedings.

ordered out of France for his part in the evasion of the embargo by the five gunboats that escaped from Cherbourg to Haifa.

Israel also announced that all adult Jordanian Arabs in occupied territories will be allowed to vote in municipal elections at some unspecified future date, an unprecedented step viewed as a move toward autonomy for the West Bank territory.

Royal Navy's Ration of Rum Called Sacred

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Royal Navy may face a minor mutiny if it insists on cutting off its sailors' daily rum ration, a member of Parliament said today.

"There is dismay and outrage in the Royal Navy over this," said James Wellbeloved, former seaman and now a Labor representative in the House of Commons. "I shall press for a debate when the House reassembles after the Christmas recess."

Wellbeloved said sailors didn't dare protest the no-rum rule, and were barred by law from writing to members of Parliament. But he said 58 Royal Navy men had defied regulations and written protest letters to him.

For 238 years, British sailors have been given a free tot of rum every day. Last month the navy decided that in the interests of safety the grog ration will end next August and sailors will be limited to three cans of beer a day. But officers will still be able to buy duty-free liquor in their wardrooms.

Opponents of the move have said that if the admirals are worried about safety in the nuclear age, liquor supplies should be ended for the officers who give the orders, not for the seamen who carry them out.

Liquor is not permitted aboard U.S. Navy ships.

Missourians Hurt In Colorado Crash

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — A truck driver and a passenger, both from Missouri, were injured early Sunday when the truck, loaded with ordinance, overturned.

The truck, driven by Harry W. Hay of Joplin, Mo., overturned on U.S. bypass a mile east of Pueblo. The truck struck a concrete gully and was badly damaged.

Hay and a passenger, John V.

Pate of Stark City, Mo., received minor injuries.

The truck, operated by Tri-State Motor Transport of Joplin, was bound for a Navy munitions station at Concord, Calif. Officials said it was en route from an Army munitions plant at Milan, Tenn.

None of the ordinance exploded and weapons teams from the Pueblo Army depot and Ft. Carson supervised reloading of the munitions.

Science Shrinks Painful Hemorrhoids Stops Itch—Relieves Pain Finds Way That Both Relieves Pain and Shrinks Piles In Most Cases

New York, N.Y. (Special): Science has found a special formula with the ability, in most cases—to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching and relieve pain. In case after case doctors proved, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. The secret is Preparation H®. There is no other formula for hemorrhoids like it. Preparation H also soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In ointment or suppository form.

THE IMPORTANCE OF A BALANCED DIET

Excessive consumption of calories is regarded as one of the most flagrant malnutrition practices in the United States today. This means overeating, and specifically overeating the wrong foods. Most persons have a distorted idea of calories, and the number required to retain normal body metabolism.

Caloric requirements vary according to age, sex, body size, and extent of activity. A man doing sedentary work may require only 2,500 calories a day, while a man at hard manual labor may require as many as 6,000 a day.

Knowing the number of calories necessary for our day-to-day existence is useless unless we can associate these figures with the food that supplies them. Many think only starches, sugars, and fats supply calories. This is a gross misconception. All foods provide calories, some many, some few.

While we can gain as many as 100 calories from one thick slice, one cube of butter, we can derive of bread, one medium potato, or just as many from one large orange or apple, a banana, or three large prunes.

The average American diet is lopsided with starches, sugars, and fats. They have the caloric content but they lack the nutritional value found in the protective foods such as milk, vegetables, fruits, lean meats and other foods.

Abstaining from these protective foods, and overeating foods that are high in calories only, tends to make a person overweight and undernourished.

In our eagerness to acquire enough calories, we ignore the need to maintain a balanced diet, accentuating protective foods. We think in terms of large slices of bread with butter and an extra serving of mashed potatoes. We are completely unmindful of the vitamin A found in green and leafy vegetables, the all-important ascorbic acid (vitamin C) found in citrus fruits, or the abundant source of calcium in milk and cheese, all of which furnish needed calories.

The trend toward malnutrition can be avoided by educating ourselves to the importance of a balanced diet.
